Astor's Cormorant Hitler's Birthday England, Rich, Worries Who Wants to Be Equal?

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International copyright and all other rights reserved.

Vincent Astor returns from a 9000-mile cruise, his yacht loaded with strange monkeys, big lizards and other creatures, including a "flightless" cormorant, big, fat, hungry, but, although a bird, unable to fly.

Carefully stuffed, that creature should be presented to Uncle Sam. It is just the bird for a fat gentleman, almost "flightless." Taxpayers will see the aptness of the cormorant gift. The cormorant is the world's biggest eater.

Praise of Hitler, celebrating his 47th birthday, by Propaganda Minister Goebbels, reminds you of Nero's greetings from his courtiers, "Caesar, Emperor, Divinity, God."

Goebbels suggests that history will recognize Hitler as the savior of "senile Europe" and the whole world. Many here would say: "Much obliged, but we would rather save our little corner for ourselves." It cannot be denied that Hitler, only forty-seven, recently a house painter, then a simple soldier in the big war, now ruling Germany, implored by the British Empire to preserve peace in Europe, has travelled a long way. Will he become Kaiser, Stalin, Czar? The 20th will be an interesting century.

Those who realize Hitler's inborn political aptitude will read without surprise, in the New York Times, the statement: "Nationalist Socialist Germany now dominates the diplomatic councils of Europe. Germany increases her strength hourly."

French officials say Germany is "secretly constructing a naval base on a Portuguese island, off the west coast of Africa."

The Nazi leader must have sound judgment, or wise advisers.

England, doing well in a business way, with more than two billion dollars' worth of Bank of England notes circulating among tradesmen, is collecting gold and depleting the French reserves. While England tries to keep down the price of her "no-gold" pound, France is afraid she will not be able to keep up the value of her gold franc, already devalued by eighty per cent of its 1914 value. What becomes of the "magic in gold?" Our dear old dollar is worth only 59 cents, and only dealers in exchange know it.

The late news is that England proposes to "curb" Mussolini all by herself, since the League of Nations will not act, and France will not help.

That might make England worry more than France does. If air war should start over London, the pound would drop far enough to please anybody. England is too wise for that nonsense; she will let some other nation test the effect of explosive and gas bombs, on big cities.

In Russia, as soon as possible "all class restrictions, all inequalities among individuals will be wiped out." Russia will find that "distinctions" and "inequalities" are necessary to get the best work out of men. An Ethiopian who has killed a lion is permitted to wear part of the lion's mane in his headdress, so other Ethiopians kill lions because "no lion-fur headdress except for killers."

All men, doubtless, are created equal, as Thomas Jefferson said, but they don't remain that way, if they can help it, in Russia or elsewhere. Stalin has not remained "equal."

An Argentine, Juan Carlos Zabala, "small, with a worried look," on a wet track, rain falling and an icy wind blowing snow and water into his eyes, beat the world's record, including that of the great Paavo Nurmi, running twenty kilometers in 1 hour, 4 minutes and two-tenths of a second. Great power is in the mixed races that make up the Argentine nation. What a heart that small Argentine must have!

Mussolini's overwhelming and rapid victory in Ethiopia recalls Danton's prescription for success in the French Revolution:

"Audacity, more audacity, always audacity."

Mussolini sent a comparatively small body of men into a difficult country of mountains, deserts, swamps, fevers, wild animals, against millions of native hard fighters; recalling Elijah and his ravens, he sends men marching ahead into the jungle, without provisions, following them through the air, drops food from airplanes.

Moscow has returned to the Japanese government in Manchukuo, with full military honors, the bodies of three Japanese soldiers killed in a fight with Soviet guards. The military honors will not console the widows, and, repeated often enough, such incidents lead to war.

HAWKES GIVEN YEAR TERM

James W. Hawkes of Dunster road, Jamaica Plain, music teacher in the Waltham schools, was sentenced by Judge David F. Dillon in superior court today to one year in the House of Correction and fined $500.

The penalties were imposed as a result of his conviction last week on a charge of conspiracy to solicit Joseph Wagner, assistant music director in the Boston schools, to give a bribe to obtain the post of director.

A vain plea for leniency was made by Hawkes' counsel, Herbert F. Callahan, who also argued fruitlessly for a stay of sentence.

Hawkes took the sentence and took calmly, but two of his sisters in the courtroom wept.

Because his counsel was engaged in another court, disposition was put off in the case of John F. Devlin, Charlestown restaurant owner and musician, who pleaded guilty to charges of solicitation to give a bribe and conspiracy to solicit to give a bribe, and then turned government witness against Hawkes, his former teacher.

Trial of Frederick Carroll and Robert Brown, both of South Boston, for alleged conspiracy to steal and other charges growing out of the school investigation, was scheduled to start today, but was put off until tomorrow.

RESCUERS 20 FEET FROM TRAPPED MEN

'TUB KILLING' CONFESSED BY YOUTH

New York, April 21 (AP)—John Fiorenza, a paroled convict and upholsterer's helper, confessed the slaying of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton today after police had traced the crime to him by a piece of cord found under the author's body.

Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine announced the solution to the case, on which 65 detectives had been working, a few hours after the 24-year-old Fiorenza was arrested.

For 11 days, Valentine said, detectives had traced the manufacture and sale of the cord—the sole clue—through factories in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Kentucky.

TRACED BY CORD

They learned it was a special kind used by upholsterers, and finally discovered similar twine in the shop where Fiorenza worked.

He had been under surveillance, Valentine said, since he and three other men reported discovery of the body on April 10.

Valentine said Fiorenza admitted attacking the 34-year-old author and then strangling her.

He was traced, the commissioner said, by a piece of twine with

POLICE SEIZE 2, WOUND 1 IN HOLDUP

Surprising bandits as they completed a holdup at the Shawmut Garage, 829 Shawmut avenue, Roxbury, police captured one and perhaps two of the holdup men and wounded another in flight today.

Five shots were fired by police at the bandit car which sped away with the wounded man and two companions, who had remained in the machine during the holdup.

At Roxbury Crossing station one of the captives, giving his name as Edward D. Wallace, 35, of Kimball avenue, Revere, was being questioned today, and a second man, giving an address in Union Park street, South Ed, was also being held, although police said they believed he was only a bystander.

REPORT BATTLE AT ADDIS ABABA

Addis Ababa, April 21 (Reuters)—A fierce battle was reported raging today north of this capital of Ethiopia. No details of the engagement were forthcoming immediately.

Addis Ababa, April 21 (AP)—A final stand in the high passes of the Shoan Mountains was disclosed today as a plan of the Ethiopian government to prevent fighting in the immediate vicinity of the capital.

The government was taking all possible plans to assure that Addis Ababa would be spared shelling if the Italian army reached this goal.

Three Police Officials Retired

Mayor Mansfield today capitulated to Police Commissioner McSweeney and signed retirement papers for Deputy Police Superintendent James McDevitt and Captain Percy S. Skillings of Division 16.

A surprise came when former Superintendent Martin H. King's papers were signed at the same time, although there had been no deadlock in his case as in the others.

ELIGIBLE AT 65

The police commissioner's victory was not complete, however. The mayor chose to pigeonhole the papers of three other policemen.

They are Lieutenant Thomas W. O'Donnell, who is at City Prison; Sergeant Edward A. Ryan of Division 11 on special duty at City Hall and Patrolman Joseph S. Whitehead of Division 2, on special detail at the city paymaster's office.

Deputy McDevitt was eligible for retirement, at 65, on January 3, 1935. He will actually retire on May 4.

RETIRES MAY 8

Ex-Superintendent King was 60 on October 23, 1935. As had been announced on the day of the wholesale police shakeup, he will retire May 8.

There was no argument between the mayor and the commissioner on King's retirement, but the opposite was true in the cases of McDevitt and Skillings. For a time it looked like a long-drawn-out deadlock.

Commissioner McSweeney was firm in his determination to oust all officers who had reached retirement age.

That the mayor still disagrees was evident today when he did not sign papers for Lieutenant O'Donnell, Sergeant Ryan and Patrolman Whitehead. His only comment today was:

"Deputy McDevitt, Captain Skillings and former Superintendent King requested me to sign their papers."

BULLETIN

Toronto, April 21 (INS)—A supply of radium from Toronto General Hospital was dispatched by plane today to Moose River, N. S., to aid in locating the two Toronto men imprisoned in the Moose river gold mine. The radium will be lowered to the men and the rescue workers in the new tunnel will use a detector to establish the exact position of the prisoners.

Moose River, N. S., April 21 (INS)—Twenty feet of solid rock and crushed mine rubble separated rescuers from Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding, entombed in the old Moose river gold mine, at 9:30 a. m. (EST) today.

This was announced by Phillip Henderson, mine manager, as the dramatic fight to save the two weakening men went into its tenth day.

Robertson and Scadding, chilled and weakened to the point of utter exhaustion, fought to hold up and retain command of their raw nerves when sickening disappointment dashed each new hope.

At 9:30 a. m., they had already clung to life more than 12 hours beyond the "limit" they set for themselves yesterday when rescuers communicated with them through a pipeline.

And they had lived many hours beyond the time set for their delivery in optimistic promises shouted to them.

Everywhere about this feverish scene today there was a new, grim tension contrasting to the wild optimism of 24 hours ago, when Robertson and Scadding were found to be still living.

In his terse announcement that there was still a wall of at least 20 feet to be penetrated by the resuce crews, Henderson held out no false hopes.

His only comment was that there is "a stern battle ahead."

Dwyer promised to issue a Bulle-

in setting forth the bald facts concerning prospects and the progress to date.

Dr. Robertson called up over the tiny microphone, which surface workers dropped into the earth to him through the pipeline, and asked for his wife, the gallant Pauline Robertson, shortly before 10 a. m.

She clamped on the headphones

at the top of the pit and listened for several minutes.

She didn't say what her husband had told her but she seemed cheered and that encouraged the rescue workers.

Dr. Robertson's next request, however, was regarded with a peculiar feeling of apprehension. He asked that a pen and paper be lowered through the pipeline to him.

It had been indicated earlier he and Scadding were anxious to write their last wills, and it was supposed that was why they wanted pen and paper.

During all this time, every minute, miners were clawing away down below trying to reach the imprisoned survivors and their dead comrade, Herman B. Magill.

They know, every time they enter the coffin-like box opening of the serpentine tunnel they are cutting, that they may not emerge alive.

WHERE DEATH LURKS

They are miners and so they know better than anyone else the danger in the old Reynolds shaft. Right beside it is the old Meagher shaft, from which 18 rescue workers narrowly escaped when it sideslipped in on them three or four days ago, when a similar attempt at entry was made.

"Any little jar," said J. E. Henniger Halifax contractor who guards the mouth of the hole, "may send a crash in. Why, that hole has gone down a lot today.

"Since I came here a week ago, it has sunk fully six feet."

He said that some of the rocks and shale under which the men were burrowing—more than 100 feet below the earth's surface—"hang by a feather."

"Every foot they go forward adds to the danger," he said.

Yet, in a down-sloping, zigzagging course, not more than four feet square and frequently less, these men keep on, hacking, chewing, fighting their way through solid rock and the rotted timber and clay of the ancient mine rubble.

They work until they are exhausted and come crawling out, grimy, scratched, sweating, in their wet oil skins to be replaced by new shifts.

Worming their way on hands and knees, and frequently on their stomachs, they have to work almost entirely by hand now.

Explosives no longer can be used because of the danger of burying Robertson and Scadding beyond all hope. The hole is too small for machinery. So the lives of the entombed pair now depend entirely on the courage, blood and muscle of these grim miners.

The brutal punishment of the work is plainly evident as each man comes up for rest. They crawl slowly to the entrance on their hands and knees, their miners' lamps shining on their caps like fireflies as they come up out of the gloom. Sometimes it is several minutes before they can straighten up.

At 10:30 a. m. Dwyer was still too busy to give out his statement on the exact situation concerning prospects for the rescue. But at the same time fresh miners were pouring in over the rough trails leading here from other mining towns to volunteer their services, their lives if necessary, in the epochal struggle.

TOPS HEROES' ROLL

The names of all men who have risked and are risking their lives cannot be mentioned in this space, but one who has been the flaming spirit of the fight is Harold Gordon of Stellarton.

Gordon, chief engineer of the Acadia coal mine, has been down in the hole almost continuously for more than 33 hours as this is written.

He is diverting the dangerous work below. Not only is he giving his cool, skilful services as an engineer, but he is down there digging and mucking with the other miners, according to the men coming to the top.

He has not asked any miner to do anything he hasn't dared and his spirit has been a flaming inspiration to the lean, gnarled men who are below with him clawing at the earth.

In a human chain, hand-to-hand, pieces of timber are being sent down to reinforce the makeshift runnels as more violent digging is required in the harder wall now separating rescuers from victims.

WAIT FATE BRAVELY

Two officials have also gone down into the murky catacombs with Gordon. They are Dwyer and Deputy Inspector Arthur Phillips of Cumberland county.

They are wearing overalls and mucking when they go down. There is no room for spectators—not even spectators who happen to be officials. Dwyer was once a practical miner.

The trapped men are showing the same spirit of heroism, though they are pitifully weak and have undergone a nightmare of the most horrible suffering.

Never in any message to his wife, has Robertson betrayed any emotion but hope. For a few hours last night, however, hours after they had been led to believe they would be rescued, it was feared their taut nerves might snap.

RESCUERS' CHEERING NOTE

They couldn't understand the delay and feared for a while the rescuers might be digging away from them instead of toward them. It was difficult for the men on the surface to explain in their shouts into the tube.

Engineers finally started to drill at a point where drilling is not needed so that the sound might be conveyed to the pair to reassure them. This was kept up at 15-minute intervals and was more encouraging than any words mumbled down the tube.

The imprisoned men cannot hear the genuine rescue work because it is being done by hand and the sound does not carry through the earth.

In his early conversation, Dr. Robertson showed he still retains his humor, even under the present ghastly conditions surrounding him.

"Is it raining up there?" he asked over his microphone. "What day is it?"

STRETCHERS WAIT LOAD

At no time did he mention his dead partner, Magill, whose body lies alongside him in the stygian tomb.

A tragic commentary on Magill's death are the two stretchers awaiting the survivors at the mine's surface.

All of Robertson's conversation is being recorded in notes by Hannigan, the engineer with the headphones. It is more difficult to talk to Robertson than for Robertson to talk to the men on the surface, as the crude telephone works only one way.

Usually the only words shouted down from the top are "yes" or "no." Anything more becomes a hopeless jumble of sound. It is difficult even to get the monosyllables through so that they are intelligible.

WARNS OF DANGER

Volunteers with deep voices are continuously being summoned to the pipeline to shout the answers, their voices soon fail and they have to be replaced steadily.

Following a conversation with Robertson shortly before noon, Mr. Ivey, Robinson's brother-in-law, said:

"The doctor's getting our ideas fine now. He's worried, though, that it may take 10 or 20 hours to get them out."

"Don't," said Engineer Hannigan, abruptly, "let anybody say anything which will tempt them to come down off the second level. They're safe where they are if anything comes down the shaft. They must not let themselves be attracted down."

SINK FOOD SHAFT

In this conversation Robertson suggested that instead of bellowing yes or no, that the men on the surface tap signals on the pipe, inasmuch as he frequently lost the shouted answers.

At 11:25 a. m. one of the begrimed miners coming up from below said the rescue crew is making excellent progress.

"We've cut through four feet in the last hour," he said.

At the same time, a second diamond drill was biting down another communication line shaft. The second shaft probably will be used for lowering food, medical supplies and dry clothing. The first pipe line must be reserved almost entirely for communication.

Meantime, calls were going out for still more volunteers.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT

"In view of the great public interest in the Moose River disaster and the variety of reports in regard to it, I feel called upon to make some statement. The accident at the Moose River gold mine was caused by the collapse of about 150 by 75 feet of the surface which sunk about 20 feet and an enormous amount of rock effectively closed the only working entrance.

"The problem confronting the rescue crew was to find the quickest possible means of finding the men.

"There were three plans contemplated:

"2—To attempt to enter by clearing out one or two old headways.

"3—To put down a diamond drill hole at a point over the men, for the purpose of communication and sending them food and clothing.

"WITH ALL SPEED"

"The drill reached the men Saturday night. The men were found alive, and food was sent down and telephone communication was established.

"Work on one headway was abandoned, but is proceeding in the second and has now reached the main floor on the first level and is being rushed as quickly as humanly possible.

"The heartbreaking feature is that it is impossible for more than two men to work at one time. The opening is only three by four feet and filled with broken timbers and rock. All material must be relayed to the surface in two buckets by a line of workmen.

"Two days ago we felt we would reach the men in a few hours. Now twenty feet of rock and fallen material lie ahead.

"Offers of assistance have come from all over Canada.

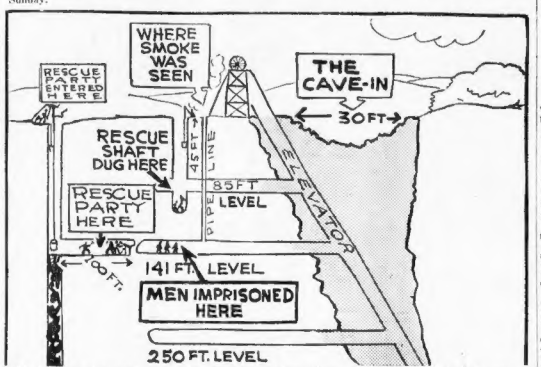
"The men risk their lives every time they go below the surface but those on the surface are anxious to get down and those working below fight against coming up.

"This is a long, hard and in some ways a most discouraging battle but the men are as keen now as they were nine days ago.

"Frequent communication leads us to believe the survivors are bearing up as well as might be expected. Unless rescue work is unduly delayed we feel confident the men will be taken out alive."

Rescue Scene in Pit Depths

Rescuers are shown here as they feverishly dig at rock wall which separates them from the two men trapped by a mine cave-in at Moose River, N. S. The men have been entombed since Easter Sunday.



This drawing illustrated the construction of the Moose River Gold Mine. Note that cave in cut off what is known as a slope (at right). The soil and rock shutting off the several levels of the mine. At left you can see where rescue workers are working down through two different shafts to the entombed men.

Speak for Yourself, Senator!

From "Affairs" of December 13, 1935

LISTENING over the radio to Senator Black of Alabama calling us the most backward nation in the world with social legislation, it would be well if the senator were to limit his remarks to himself and his state, the home of Heflin. Perhaps in that case he would be right.

Speaking of beez-i-ness with a slur and a sneer, which he felt called to bring into his discourse many times for emphasis, Black showed a personal hatred and intolerance, which would seem to preclude any fair and unbiased judgment on his part.

Senator Black might admire the social conditions of dictatorial and collectivist states, but it is very doubtful whether any of our workmen would want to change places with these others. Our labor is still paid better wages, better clothed, better housed and better fed than the laborers in these other states, which Senator Black so fondly admires.

Nor do our poor have to eat horsemeat, as do so many in foreign countries. Funny, also, that other states see fit to ask our economists and business men for help in their own problems.

LIVES IN BROOKLYN

Valentine said the youth told him that on Thursday, April 9, the day before the slaying, he was sent to the Titterton apartment to receive instructions for repairing a divan.

At that time he saw Mrs. Titterton. The next morning, Valentine quoted him, he returned to the apartment alone, seized Mrs. Titterton, placed a gag in her mouth and bound her arms.

CUTS TWINE

After she was dead, the story continued, he placed the body in the bathtub, and cut the twine from her hands.

Florenza returned to work, and came back with Theodore Kruger, of the upholstering firm, to deliver the divan. They found the door to the fourth floor apartment ajar, and called two building superintendents.

Florenza and the other three were among a dozen persons questioned carefully immediately after police learned of the slaying.

Valentine and District Attorney William C. Dodge, who joined in announcing the solution of the crime, said Florenza had been under constant surveillance.

SPECIAL TWINE

Working with a piece of twine as virtually their only clue, police traced its manufacture and learned it was a special brand used by upholsterers.

Florenza has a record of four arrests, police said, and was sent to Elmira Reformatory for grand larceny on one complaint. In two other cases he was given suspended sentences, and one complaint was dismissed.

All the previous arrests had been for burglary or grand larceny.

When Valentine made the announcement at police headquarters, Florenza was being held at some midtown point which police did not divulge. They said he would be taken to the scene of the crime during the afternoon.

Florenza was arrested this morning and was questioned for several hours by Dodge and Valentine.

ZIEGFELD GIRL TO WED WRITER OF SONGS

EILEEN PERCY

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Hollywood, April 21 (U8)—Early in June Eileen Percy, one of the best liked girls in Hollywood, will become the bride of Harry Ruby, member of the famous song writing team of Kalmar and Ruby.

Eileen and Harry have been going about together for the past few months. Their engagement has been rumored from time to time, but it wasn't until today that Eileen told this writer that she will become Mrs. Ruby within the next six weeks.

This marriage should be a happy one since both Miss Percy and Mr. Ruby are especially congenial and each is interested in motion pictures.

Eileen started her film career as Douglas Fairbanks' leading lady. He saw her on the New York stage, and was so impressed with her beauty that he promptly signed her to come to Hollywood.

She was one of the famous Ziegfeld girls, having been in the Follies at the time Marion Davies was a Follies' beauty. Her friendship with Marion started at that time and has continued through the years. Marion is one of Eileen's closest and deapest friends.

Pope Urges Strict Control of Movies

Vatican City, April 21 (AP)—Control of motion picture production was urged today by Pope Pius in an emphatic address to several hundred delegates attending the International Convention of Movie and Press Writers.

His Holiness said:

"Control is one of the great needs, one of the great necessities for keeping moving picture production in lines where it ought to remain—under pain of enormous guilt."

Making one of the longest speeches he has delivered in recent years, Pope Pius said this control should be just, neither too severe nor too indulgent.

He called bad movies "a real insult to all that's beautiful, delicate and honorable in souls, particularly young souls," and urged independent movie criticism divorced from producing companies.

"The movie wouldn't be what it is today," he said, "if moving picture press criticism had from the beginning fulfilled its duties according to virtue, truth and justice."

The Phillips Brooks Club of St. Mary's Episcopal Church in Dorchester will hold its reorganization meeting tonight at the parish house, Cushing avenue, to elect officers and adopt a constitution. Bert Breckbank, veteran Boston newspaper man, acting president, will preside.

Sound movies of the United States navy in battle maneuvers will be the feature. Lunch will be served.

TAPPERS' Race Cable JAILS 4

R. I. BETTING RING HIT

Warwick, R. I., April 21—A powerful gambling syndicate was smashed today, police said, by the arrest of four men in two raids and seizure of a private telephone system utilizing a submarine cable, wire-tapping outfits and an "outlaw" switchboard.

The system, established within the last two weeks, was to have been used to steal and illegally distribute horse race information in New England, according to Police Chief Henry J. Ledoux.

He said political protection had been promised the syndicate on the assumption that he would be ousted from office.

Even police wires had been tapped, he charged.

State police, Warwick detectives and representatives of the office of Attorney General Hartigan in a state police boat followed the cable across the bay a quarter of a mile today and located the other end of it in the Scanlon home at Warwick Downes.

CLEANED OUT

The house was searched but it had been cleaned out.

Chief Ledoux said:

"This gang thought I would be out by this time, and that is why they moved in. I know that the submarine cable, which we now find ran from the Rutter house out into the bay and over to Scanlon's house, was put down two weeks ago.

"This wire tapping equipment that we seized was used to tap wires not only to keep pace with the horse racing but also to know what the police were doing. I know that my house telephone line has been tapped, and I would not doubt but that others have been likewise.

"This crowd expected to operate on a big scale and they are closely connected with some of those who are asking that I be removed."

PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Scanlon is free under $500 bail. He pleaded not guilty to the charge of possessing property stolen from the telephone company.

"The submarine cable was operated with switches so that if the police raided one place, a switch could be thrown and the other places would not be affected," Chief LeDoux said.

O'Connor pleaded not guilty to four charges, two being that of a common gambler, one alleging conspiracy to promote illegal horse race and number pool betting. He is held under $12,000 bail for trial. Rutter is held under $8000 on similar charges.

Osterman was charged with conspiracy and his bail was fixed at $3000.

Violence Feared As Race-Gang Splits

Worcester, April 21—Violence appeared imminent today as race track bookies went into conference with their "mouthpieces" after one man was beaten up during the morning hours.

Police said they expected an outbreak of gang war unless the matter cools off.

The beating was the result of the raid yesterday in which 33 persons were arrested and 50 others escaped through a side door.

At that time, a gunman was questioned and later released, although the word had been passed along that he was "interested" in the bookie establishment.

13 WOMEN RESCUED

Saved as Nashua 'Y' Burns

Nashua, N. H., April 21—A matron and 12 girls were rescued by police and firemen today as a fire, for which two alarms were sounded, swept through the Y. W. C. A. building on Temple street, in the center of the city.

Harry Gibson, the janitor, who was fixing the furnace in the basement, where the fire started, narrowly escaped being engulfed in flaming gas.

Gibson smelled smoke under the stairs and went to investigate. As he did so, the fire burned through the gas meter, releasing gas which immediately took fire and poured flame through the cellar.

ROUSES WIFE

He managed to get out a side door into a yard and ran into the building to arouse his wife, who is the matron of the dormitory, and the girls.

After shouting to them he tried to telephone the fire department, but the wires had been burned. He ran to the police station, 200 yards distant, and returned with Lieutenant Charles Desmarais and Patrolmen John Clark, Fred Brown and Sylvio Landry.

They dashed into the smoke-filled building and led out six of the girls, but the other six were trapped. Seeking refuge on the flat roof of a porch on the second-story level, they were taken down by firemen with ladders.

WOODEN BUILDING

The building is an old wooden mansion with a wooden addition in which a gymnasium and dormitory are located. The loss was estimated at between $8000 and $10,000. The flames burned through the entire structure from basement to roof.

The rescued girls are Thelma Covey, York, Me.; Julia Tillotson, Lawrence, Mass.; Ruth Harris, Claremont, N. H.; Noella LeClair, Nashua; Catherine Coyle, Somersworth, N. H.; Lorraine Dumais, Somersworth; Jean Hudon, Nashua; Louise Pelletier, Nashua; Eleanor Raymond, Somersworth; Angelina Constantino, Nashua; Mildred Israel, Lancaster, N. H., and Marion Kurkjian, secretary of the International Institute, temporarily a resident of this city.

Death at Wheel Ends Romance

DOROTHY C LIVESAY
Her Fiance Reported Dying

Middleton, April 21—A Lawrence girl is dead and the young man she was to have married next month is dying after an auto-bus crash on the Andover-Lawrence turnpike, in which six others were injured.

Dorothy Claire Livesey, 24, of West street, Lawrence, was killed outright when an Eastern Massachusetts street railway bus crashed head-on into the automobile in which she was riding.

Charles E. Griffin, 24, of Saratoga street, Lawrence, her fiance, was taken unconscious from behind the wheel of the automobile to Hunt Memorial Hospital in Danvers. Twenty-seven stitches were taken in his head. Little hope was held for his recovery.

The bus, driven by Edward F. Jenkins, 36, of Webb street, Salem, figured in the fatal crash a fraction of a second after it had grazed an automobile operated by James W. Russell, of Fairway avenue, Peabody.

Russell and Miss Mary Nyland, 24, of Salem, were cut and bruised when Russell's automobile left the highway and plowed into a ditch. Mrs. Russell was uninjured.

Robber, U.S. Agent Shot in Camp Duel

Kansas City, April 21 (AP)—Clarence Sparger, said by federal agents to be a member of the Walter (Irish) O'Malley gang, was shot three times, and a federal agent was wounded in a gun fight at a tourist camp in Hickman Mills, Mo., five miles south, today.

John Langdon, companion of Sparger, surrendered after 15 federal officers and representatives of the state highway patrol surrounded the tourist cabin.

Sparger was shot three times. The government declined to disclose the name of the federal agent who was wounded.

Smith said Sparger was sought in connection with the robbery of the First National Bank at Neosho, Mo., March 2, 1935.

Last Saugus Vet Of Civil War Dies

Dr. Gale died without his one last wish being fulfilled—strength enough to march in the Memorial Day parade next month. The aged veteran was the list living member of the Gen. E. W Hicks Post, G. A. R., and the oldest member of Phillips Exeter Academy alumni. Dr. Gale graduated from the Exeter, N. H., school 86 years ago.

Colorado Troops Tighten Blockade

Trinidad, Colo., April 21 (AP)—Reinforcements were ordered today for national guard troops enforcing a barrier against incoming "cheap labor" along Colorado's southern boundary.

Approximately 70 persons, mostly Spanish-Americans and Mexicans, were turned back yesterday, the first day of Governor Ed C. Johnson's border patrol.

Regal Hostess Brews Her Tea

PRINCESS ELIZABETH
Gay at 10th Birthday Party

HE SENDS CAKE TO PRINCESS

London, April 21 (AP)—"Uncle David" sent a note of apology today to soften the disappointment of little Princess Elizabeth, second in succession to the British throne, who had expected the wearer of Britain's crown to attend her tenth birthday party.

Due to a family rule, she may not keep many gifts sent by persons unknown to the royal family.

Another member of British royalty who could not attend was the princess royal, the Viscountess Lascelles.

Cuts Own Cake

Guests who did attend, however, and whom the princess served with generous slices of a birthday cake baked by the king's own chef, included her parents, the Duke and Duchess of York, and her uncles and aunts, the Dukes and Duchesses of Kent and Gloucester.

Exceedingly personal were the invitations, too—written by the little princess herself on mauve-edged stationery stamped with the initial "E" and a royal crown.

This formal affair was at the royal lodge at Windsor, and bells of Windsor Castle, St. George's chapel and Windsor parish church were rung in her honor.

MEDICAL World Eyes BABY

32-OUNCE GIRL DOING WELL

Norwood, April 21—Baby Baker, who weighed but 32 ounces cribside when she came into the world at Norwood Hospital eight days ago, has gained 11 ounces — and more. She may yet be a bouncing girl.

Only Dr. Thomas H. O'Toole and her two nurses see the tiny baby, who since birth has been kept in an incubator.

"We are not even taking her out to weigh her these last few days," a hospital official stated today.

"She is getting along so beautifully that we are not chancing the slightest set-back. She is being kept in a small, well-heated room off the nursery ward, an unvarying temperature is maintained, for she must be protected from any change in temperature."

Originally fed with a medicine-dropper, the infinitesimal infant was put "on the bottle" Sunday and has since been gaining steadily if almost imperceptibly.

Rarely Survive

Boston baby specialists are watching Baby Baker's progress with the keenest interest. They said that while an occasional 32-ounce baby is born it is almost unheard of for them to survive more than a few hours after birth.

The "tiniest baby," Nancy Lee Vest, died March 25 at Oakland, Calif., after science had battled nearly two months to keep her alive. She weighed only one pound at birth and was hailed as the smallest baby to survive for 24 hours. Failure of certain organs to develop caused death.

Baby Baker, it was pointed out, shows perfect development even though she did arrive a miniature two months before her 38-year-old mother, Mrs. Rose Baker, expected her.

Besides her anxious parents, two excited little sisters and a brother have yet to have their first glimpse of the wonder-baby. The three older children weighed usual amounts at birth.

ROOSEVELTS TO HONOR HOWE AT RITES IN FALL RIVER

Washington, April 21 (AP)—The east room of the White House—rich in history of events both sad and happy—today became a funeral chapel for the last rites to Colonel Louis McHenry Howe.

Plans called for services at 4 p. m., with close friends and relatives attending, and with the Rev. C. Ernest Smith, rector of St. Thomas Episcopal Church, officiating.

BOSTON SON THERE

Tonight the body will be taken to Fall River, Mass., for burial tomorrow. The President and Mrs. Roosevelt will accompany the special funeral train. After services at the grave at 10:20 a. m. tomorrow, the chief executive will return to Washington.

There was deep sadness at the White House yesterday as the President made final arrangements for the funeral—the 14th in the history of the executive mansion.

With the President were Mrs. Howe and her son, Hartley, of Boston; a daughter, Mrs. Robert Baker and her husband, of Urbana, Ill., arrived later. Also here for the services were James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, and Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, the President's son-in-law and daughter.

Howe's two associates in the White House secretariat, Stephen T. Early and Marvin H. McIntyre, also planned to accompany the body to Fall River.

BIER-ROOM OF PRESIDENTS

Five of the nation's presidents and three first ladies have been buried from the stately East Room. They were William Henry Harrison, Zachary Taylor, Abraham Lincoln, William McKinley, Warren G. Harding, Mrs. Tyler, the first Mrs. Benjamin Harrison and the first Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

Several others, including Cabinet members, have been buried from the chamber.

In this same room the Marquis Lafayette was feted. Maria Monroe was married. The Russian Grand Duke Alexis danced there.

There also the present King Edward of Britain, then Prince of Wales, was greeted by President Coolidge.

Fall River Mourns One And Honors Another

Fall River, April 21 (INS)—Preparing for the procession tomorrow of President Roosevelt at funeral services for Colonel Louis McHenry Howe, city officials today laid plans for greeting the chief executive and mourning a prominent citizen.

Mayor Alexander Murray conferred with representatives of the Treasury Department secret service on arrangements for guarding the President on the mile-long journey from the railroad station to Oak Grove Cemetery. All policemen were ordered on duty.

President Roosevelt's arrival is expected for between 9 and 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Arrival of the president will mark the first time in a quarter of a century that the nation's chief executive has come here.

Holdup Suspect

Edward Wallace, in custody of Patrolman Thomas Johnston, was held for questioning today in connection with the investigation into the robbery of a garage near Roxbury street and Shawmut avenue, Roxbury.

of Ruggles street, an employe, were in the garage office when two armed bandits entered.

Hershenson and MacAllister complied.

"Don't put them up too high," the same bandit ordered. "Just keep them out of your pockets. We don't want to have this look like a stickup. Turn around to the wall. Step away from that window."

Addressing MacAllister, the bandit then said:

LIFTS KEYS

Imploring them not to shoot, MacAllister did as ordered. The bandit leader thrust a hand into Hershenson's pockets until he found keys, but he missed a revolver the garage owner had in his right-hand hip pocket.

With a key this bandit opened the safe and took out an envelope containing $403. The other bandit went to the cash register and removed $56.

Angrily, Hershenson half turned and snapped:

The bandit leader merely laughed and said to his companion:

"Let's go."

STEP ON VICTIM

As they started out of the office the other bandit stepped on the prostrate form of MacAllister.

"Muddy waters under my feet," remarked the bandit.

Angered, Hershenson drew his own revolver and started after the bandits, who had broken into a run as they reached the garage entrance.

A police cruiser car, containing Captain James T. Sheehan, Sergeant Edward Carey and Patrolmen Michael Kane and Lawrence Murphy, all of Roxbury Crossing station, had stopped, meanwhile, in front of the garage.

A short time before, the officers, while cruising the district on an inspection tour, had sighted a blue sedan with number plates reported stolen. They had lost the car, but here they found it—parked across from the garage and with two men inside.

Captain Sheehan and the other officers were just alighting when the two bandits, one carrying the money envelope, came running from the garage.

The officers shouted at the men to halt and Patrolman Murphy and Sergeant Carey seized one. The second man raced for the blue sedan. Patrolman Kane fired several times. The bandit cried out and seized his side, but the two men in the car drew him in and the sedan sped away in the direction of Boston.

Police, meanwhile, had also seized Hershenson when he came running from the garage with a revolver, in belief that he was a bandit. They released him quickly, however.

Throwing the seized bandit and another man who was in front of the garage and who was thought to be a lookout into the cruiser car, the police turned the machine and sped after the bandit car. It had too great a start, however, and the pursuers again lost it.

Less than an hour later the bandit car was found abandoned in Parmalee street, near Northampton street, Roxbury.

Acting on a tip, a search was begun in a nearby house in belief that the fugitives might be hiding.

On Wallace, when he was taken to the station, according to police, was found $56.55. The package of money from the safe had gone with the bandit believed to have been wounded.

ALLEN SPEAKS AT LANDON RALLY HERE SATURDAY

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Former United States Senator Henry J. Allen of Kansas will be the principal speaker at a big Landon for President meeting next Saturday night in Tremont Temple.

In addition to the Wichita publisher, other speakers from Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut will be on the platform, testifying to the tremendous sentiment throughout New England in favor of the presidential candidacy of Governor Alfred M. Landon of Kansas.

Outstanding Republican leaders of Massachusetts will take part in the program which will start at 8 p. m. and be broadcast over Station WNAC at 10 p. m.

The meeting is designed to bring about a closer view of the record, accomplishments and policies of the Kansan budget balancer, and to promote a big turnout of Republican voters in the state primary a week from today.

6000 INVITED

It will mark a high point in the weeks of effort of the Landon for President Club of Massachusetts.

Some 6000 invitations are being sent out from the club headquarters to Republican city and town committees all over the state to attend the function. The meeting is open to all voters.

One of the most important phases of the Republican primary, which is being stressed on every occasion by the Landon speakers, is the opportunity which the voters have of writing in the name of Alfred M. Landon in the space provided on the ballot.

A special oblong space for the expression of the voter's presidential preference is provided for this purpose. It is being pointed out that the delegates to the Republican national convention, through a majority vote for Landon, will have in effect a mandate to support his candidacy in the convention at Cleveland next June.

ENROLLMENT GROWS

Landon's popularity continues unabated among the Republican voters in Massachusetts. Thousands of enrollment cards in the Landon for President Club at the Parker House continue to arrive daily.

In several of the congressional districts where Landon slates are contesting against undisclosed slates, more than the usual interest in a Republican primary has been aroused and is expected to swell the total primary vote to proportions that otherwise could not be looked for.

Massachusetts Republican women will have the opportunity of meeting Miss Nellie Burleigh, Landon supporter and Maine delegate to the G. O. P. convention, next Thursday at the Massachusetts Women's Republican Club on Beacon street.

At this meeting Mrs. Robert Bacon, wife of the New York congressman, will be the guest speaker. Miss Burleigh is president of the Women's Republican Club of Maine.

Among more recent joiners of the Landon for President Club are Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Weeks Roberts of Wellesley Hills and Charles S. Charleston, former treasurer of the Real Estate Owners and Tenants' League of Boston.

CURLEY ORDERS RAIL MERGER

Governor Curley today virtually ordered the merger of the Chelsea-Revere division of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Co. with the Boston Elevated Railway, which would provide a single fare to Revere Beach, instead of two as at present.

The governor said he had conferred with members of the Public Utilities Commission and had instructed them that unless a better sale figure for this trolley and bus division is offered by the Eastern, to take the necessary measures immediately to provide for the sale and purchase.

Originally the price asked for the property was $2,500,000, including trackage, trolleys, buses and other rolling stock.

Later the price was reduced 40 per cent and is now standing at $1,500,000.

"The adoption of a single fare system," said Governor Curley, "has been recommended by all the authorities who have given consideration and study to the question, and it should prove of immeasurable benefit to the transportation facilities that should be offered as a consequence of the sale and purchase."

British Boost Tax, New Arms Blamed

London, April 21 (INS)—Announcing a two-pence (about four cents) per pound increase in the tax on tea, England's traditional staple beverage, Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain outlined a national budget for 1936-37 in the House of Commons today which envisages a surplus of 484,000 pounds (about $2,420,000).

Admitting a struggle to balance the budget, Chamberlain blamed it upon Britain's vast new armament program, the largest ever planned in peace time.

Chamberlain announced final budget figures as follows: Revenue, 789,381,000 pounds (about $3,991,905,000); expenditures, 797,897,000 pounds (about $3,989,485); surplus, 484,000 pounds (about $2,420,000).

ROMAN HOLIDAY FINDS DUCE IN PEACE MOOD

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press

Rome, April 21—Premier Mussolini proclaimed today to thousands of cheering Romans, celebrating the 2689th anniversary of the founding of Rome:

"Our ship has arrived in port with all sails spread."

Mussolini appeared in higher spirits than he had for many weeks. He came to his office balcony clad in the gray-green uniform of an honorary corporal of the Fascist militia and the cheers of the crowd brought a broad smile to his face.

READY TO LISTEN

He raised his arm repeatedly in a smart Fascist salute.

Informed Fascist sources said, while Il Duce was raising his cry of victory, that Italy was willing to listen to a "supreme appeal" from the League of Nations for peace, but only on the preliminary conditions already presented.

Those conditions, submitted at Geneva yesterday by Baron Pompeo Aloisi, were occupation of Addis Ababa and other principal Ethiopian centers, and Italian control over mobilization points and frontier posts through which supplies might reach Ethiopia.

This was the first work in clearing away unsightly structures near the Roman Senate—one of the many public works projects being inaugurated on this anniversary.

ARMY ADVANCING

The holiday war communique from Marshal Pietro Badoglio reported that the southern army in East Africa was advancing anew after a victory over Ethiopian troops last week, and that the northern headquarters were transferred to Desaye, once headquarters of Emperor Haile Selassie.

Fascists anticipated a demonstration over capture of Ethiopia's capital, Addis Ababa.

The anniversary was also the occasion of the eighth quintennial census, designed to show how great Italy has grown since Il Duce determined to recreate the ancient Roman glories.

When Fascism came to power the Italian population numbered 38,000,000—by the 1921 census—and Mussolini proclaimed that it must reach 60,000,000 by 1950, "if Italy is to count for something."

La in-American Na ions to Withdraw

Copy ight, 1936, by International News Service

Wa hington, April 21 (INS)—A movement is developing among the nations of Latin America to quit the League of Nations, according to information which has reached the state department.

The Latin American republics were reported to be disgusted with the inefficacy of the league and its use by the big powers of Europe as an instrument of national policy.

Brazil already has walked out and Paraguay has served notice of its intention to quit.

The movement to abandon it has now spread to Chile, Mexico, Uruguay and Salvador.

Sir Arthur Salter Luncheon Speaker

Sir Arthur Salter, K. C. B., internationally known British economist and holder of many important government posts during and following the World War, will be the guest speaker at a Boston Chamber of Commerce members' luncheon tomorrow in the main dining room at 12:30 p. m.

Communists Just Fanatics; Fail to Cripple Cotton Crops

How do Communists mislead Americans into joining their movement to destroy the United States?

What are they taught in the Communist schools to do once they join the movement?

What happens to them when they obey the secret instructions to incite riot and violence given by Communist leaders?

These questions and many others are answered by Clay Naff, a former well-to-do resident of Arizona. He fell into the Red web, became Communist candidate for governor in that state and was sentenced to prison for inciting to riot and violence.

It was not until then that Naff realized how sinister was the movement of which he had become a participant.

A series of repentant articles, written in jail and entitled, "Why I Have Quit Communism," was the result.

Naff has just completed his sentence and been released.

ARTICLE THREE
By CLAY NAFF
Former Communist Candidate for Governor of Arizona

The first of my major activities as Communist "head man" was to promote a grand strike of cotton pickers in Arizona.

We thought that such a strike would cripple the moneyed cotton men, or at least give the pickers more pay and shorter hours. Any concession we could force would be worth while, because we could always claim credit for it and thereby increase our Communist membership.

When the strike started, the picketing began at once. One group would parade up and down the rural roads and call to the men who hadn't left their cotton rows. Taunts, catcalls, pleadings, everything would be employed to make them quit work and join the strike.

Into Fields

Another and more daring Communist worker would quietly circulate around the county and go right into the fields themselves.

He would be seen squatting among a group of pickers, exhorting them to strike for higher pay, or whatever was being demanded.

He worked in advance of the strike, and after it started, too. We had several of his kind.

It takes nerve to do that, because like as not a farmer will see you and come stalking out with a double-barrelled shotgun. The farmer wants his cotton harvested. He is paying all he can for it, and he despises Communists. He might shoot to kill.

But a fanatical Communist worker, such as I was at that stage, will dare anything for "the cause." Looking back now, I can see that it was a shameful case of misdirected enthusiasm and energy, but it is absolutely impossible to reason with ardent workers of this type until something has shocked them into normalcy.

The whole state was in an uproar. Almost anywhere you could ride out and encounter a Communist agitator leaving a farming district—with a long queue of grim, armed farmers behind him!

I don't know why more of our comrades weren't beaten up. It is a wonder that the farmers did not start shooting. Back in Kentucky, my native state, I imagine such a thing would have brought violence at once. In Arizona the farmers tried to abide by law. We didn't want them to be law-abiding.

Knew Governor

The Communists never respect American law. There is no law, to a genuine Red, but the Soviet law. The more trouble we could stir up, the better. Trouble would ultimately breed national civil war and revolution, we hoped—thereby enabling the poor people, the workers, to get control and overthrow capitalism. Such was our goal.

The Arizona state government was forced to step in. The farmers and merchants and bankers demanded that something be done to settle the trouble. We were invited to send in representatives to confer with Governor B. B. Moeur and other state dignitaries.

It happened that I already knew the governor, and had had some political dealing with him before I joined the Communists.

The arbitration board met, our committee with a committee from the cotton planters. They hoped to settle the strike somehow. We would not give an inch. The meeting adjourned with nothing achieved.

But Governor Moeur was smart. He forthwith announced in the newspapers that "the strike has been settled." "The strike is ended." "Cotton pickers are returning to their jobs." "The cotton strike is over." Such was the news.

It was forcing the facts. But it proved to be true! People read that the strike was over, and returned to their jobs! All our shouting couldn't stop them.

"Why, you're wrong," they told us. "See here, the papers say the strike is over, so we are going on back to work. You must be misinformed."

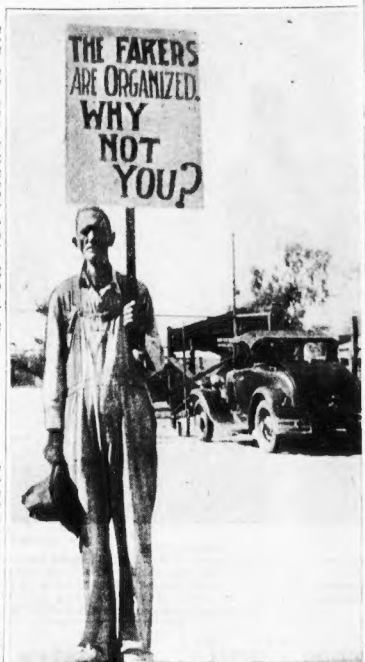
I couldn't combat Governor Moeur's system, so my strike just petered out. I was disgusted, mad tired, almost sick from overwork, out of money, out of enthusiasm.

It was Saturday night. My cotton strike around Phoenix had failed. I was lower than a snake's belly; ready to chuck it all, when—all of a sudden—who should come into my Communist headquarters but a committee of beaming, excited men from down at Buckeye, Arizona, another big cotton area several miles away.

"Say, Mr. Naff," they greeted me with elation, "we have decided to join you! We're all going on strike at Buckeye, joining you Phoenix fellows, hot dog! You gotta come back with us right now, because the pickers are all assembled waiting for you to make a speech to them!"

I groaned. I was a Communist. More, I was a Communist organizer. I had to go.

The fourth article in this series will be published in the Boston Evening American tomorrow.



A comrade in the Phoenix strike. This cotton picker was one of those who aided leaders in their plan to promote a grand strike among the cotton pickers in Arizona. He and others who were induced to aid are referred to in the Clay Naff story today.

600 STUDENTS PEN ESSAYS ON AMERICANISM

Americanism is a living subject in Jamaica Plain schools. The students think about it and understand it.

No stronger proof can be offered than that 600 essays were submitted in the contest sponsored by Michael J. O'Connell Post No. 76 of the American Legion Americanism Committee.

The contest was open to all students of the Jamaica Plain schools from the sixth grade up.

And what astounded the judges was that there were so many really excellent essays submitted that they have been studying them virtually since the close of the contest, March 31.

11 WINNERS SELECTED

The judges were the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Francis Burke, Blessed Sacrament Church, Jamaica Plain; Carl Dreyfus, publisher of the Boston Evening American; Maurice J. Lacey, headmaster of Jamaica Plain high school; Frederick J. McLaughlin, president of the Jamaica Plain board of trade, and Thomas P. Donahue, commander of Post No. 76.

From the 600 essays they selected 11 winners.

The first two prizes are gold American Legion medals, one for the winner in a public school, and the other for a winner in a parochial school.

The two second prizes, similarly awarded, are silver medals.

In addition, seven bronze medals were struck and inscribed, one for each of seven best essays in the seven schools entered.

MEDALS FROM GOVERNOR

The announcement will be made the evening of National Americanism Day, April 27, at the Mary E. Curley school, and there will be glory enough for the winners when they receive their prizes.

For they will gather with all the others who submitted essays and will not know of their success until their names are called.

They will come forward from the audience and receive their medals from the hands of Governor Curley himself.

Furthermore, the Boston Evening American will print the two gold medal essays in full after the winners are announced, to show Boston readers what school children think of Americanism.

Tea Honors Martha Rice on Her Engagement to W. T. Crocker

By BETTY ALDEN

MR. AND MRS. ARTHUR W. RICE of Canton avenue, Milton, are giving a small tea party this afternoon in honor of their daughter, Miss Martha Rice, who has just become engaged to Wethered Thomas Crocker.

Miss Rice attended Milton Academy before making her debut in the 1932-33 season and is a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club . . . The Rices have a large and influential family tree, whose branches spread out over all the aristocratic cities of the East . . . and in Martha's immediate family she has a sister, Mrs. Kennard Woodward of Dover (Adelaide Rice) and a brother, Arthur, Jr. . . .

MARTHA RICE

Her fiance is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel E. M. Crocker and attended the Kent School in Connecticut . . .

Pop Benefits Planned

WHENEVER THE MONTH of May rolls around it brings Pop Concerts and benefit nights at Symphony Hall . . . In the past few years the plain interior of the hall has been changed to resemble everything from a sun-baked stretch of sand in southern France for a "Night on the Riviera," to a bit of old Montmartre on a "Parisian Night" . . . But seldom, if ever, has it heeded that time worn admonition of the travel agencies to "See America First" . . .

This May things will be different, however . . . The Christopher Shop is changing the nationality of its benefit night from Italian to American and is sponsoring an "American Night at the Pops," at which the flower sellers and ushers will be dressed as Uncle Sam and other typical early American characters . . .

They have taken the night of May 7 for their revelry and the following evening the Massachusetts Indian Association will go way back to the original Americans for the inspiration for their "American Indian Night" . . .

The Boston Dispensary and the Boston Floating Hospital will put on a real New Orleans Mardi Gras celebration on May 11 . . . In order to make its decorations more authentic and in keeping with the New Orleans tradition, committee members have been delving into Mardi Gras legend for weeks and everyone is awaiting with anticipation the results of their research . . .

Committee Busy With Plans

ONE THING we do know and that is that Mrs. Francis S. Moulton, who has undertaken the responsibility of transforming Symphony Hall into a suitable setting for the Mardi Gras, has added several very talented people to her committee and they are designing iron grill work balconies and thinking of all kinds of ways of creating "atmosphere" with oleander trees, trailing vines and fragrant camellias . . . Alexander F. Law has volunteered to assist his law associate, William Power Blodget, on Mrs. Moulton's committee, and Mrs. Richard S. Humphrey, a trustee of the hospital, is also assisting this group . . .

Mrs. John N. Stevens has been bringing in additional names of prospective subscribers to the invitation committee and Mrs. Knowles Gray, who has assumed the difficult job of ticket chairman, has augmented her assistants to include Mrs. Henry A. Laughlin of Concord, Helen Jackson of Westwood, Mrs. George J. Prescott, Mrs. John I. Wylde, Mrs. Henry P. Clark and Mrs. Otis Weld Richardson . . .

Even though America has been fast developing a genius of native gypsies since the advent of the automobile house trailer, it would take some stretch of the imagination to try to connect a Gypsy Night with the current American trend of this season's Pop Concerts . . . Everyone knows that gypsies come from the legendary land of Romany and, though we are not too sure just where Romany is, or was, we are sure it isn't America . . .

But we hear that Nat Saltonstall and Gardner Cox, those indefatigable young men who made the vivid decorations for the Modern Arts Ball last week, have been assigned by their friends to concoct a setting suitable for the "Gypsy Pops," which the Social Service Department of the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital is sponsoring on May 18 . . .

Gypsy Night Invitations Mailed

MRS. GEORGE PARKMAN DENNY and her crew of assistants on the committee for Gypsy Night, have sub-divided the duties so that Mrs. J. A. Lowell Blake is consulting Arthur Fiedler about the musical program which is to contain a number of well loved Gypsy songs . . . Mrs. Elliot C. Cutler has supervised the mailing of invitations which invite the recipient to Romany Road on May 18 and which were designed by Gardner Cox . . .

Mrs. Roger B. Merriman and Mrs. Denny are keeping tabs on the reservations, and Miss Catherine Homans heads a useful group who come under the heading "Odd Jobs" . . .

Ellen Pierce Cheever has corralled a group of young marrieds and post debs to pick out pretty usherettes and flower vendors, who will be costumed in typical Gypsy regalia . . . Helping her are Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott, Jr., Caroline Hunnewell, Mary Frost, Lottie Denny, Mrs. Sargent Collier, Eleanor Gibson, Harriet Moseley, Francis J. Williams, Mrs. Horace Soule, Jr., and Mrs. Theodore Chase . . .

* * *

Mrs. S. Burt Wolbach and Mrs. Richard Ames, both of Wayland, are among the socialites who have signed up for tables at Radcliffe's Night at the Pops on May 20 . . . President Ada L. Comstock is one of the leading sponsors of this affair and Radcliffe-ites who are spreading the news about this event to augment the Regional Scholars Fund of the Radcliffe Club of Boston, are Mrs. A. Barr Comstock of Dedham, Mrs. Robert M. Blackall of Milton, Mrs. Charles Peabody of Cambridge, Mrs. Frederick Lansing Day and Mrs. Louis V. Green, also of Cambridge, and Miss Marian Vaillant of Commonwealth avenue . . .

HOLY CROSS GRADS MAKE MERRY AT GAY MUSICALE AND DANCE

Cambridge Boat Club Scene of Dance

NORINNE FEENY E. CORBETT WALSH

COFFERS OF Holy Cross Club of Boston scholarship fund swelled considerably from the glee club concert and dance last night at the Copley-Plaza. E. Corbett Walsh of Boston, general chairman of the affair, escorted his fiancee, Norinne Feeny of Medford. Norinne is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Feeny.

MURIEL JOYCE ROBERT FEELEY

Musicale Aids Holy Cross Fund

Glee Club Event Attracts Many Fashionables

WAS IT the appeal a collegiate chorus has for Bostonians or the hard work of an ingenious committee that made the Holy Cross Club of Boston musicale such an outstanding success?

A glee concert and dance might have been a novelty . . . but the scholarship fund benefit last night at the Copley-Plaza remains the SUCCESS of the season.

Close to two thousand attended and the majority remained for the dancing which followed. Boston alumni of Holy Cross planned the party but the women's auxiliary under the leadership of Mrs. Sheldon Daley deserves the credit . . . as ticket sellers they must have been persistent.

Velvet Gown

Mrs. Daley wore an effective gown of dark blue velvet and a large clip of rhinestones and Mrs. C. J. E. Kickham of Jamaica Plain, whose husband is president of the group, was lovely in a net frock of the same color and a corsage of gardenias.

Chairman of the party, E. Corbett Walsh received congratulations on the evening's success. With him was his fiancee, Norinne Feeny of Medford, whose black sheer was trimmed with tiny rows of lace.

Other members of the party were Margaret Young, escorted by Timothy Feeny of Medford, treasurer of the club and Miriam Walsh in a spring gown of orchid net was accompanied by Dr. Edward Gilligan.

Among the box-holders were two of the season's brides-elect . . . Alice Grandison and Mary Jane Ryan. In their party were Margaret Culhane and Jim Nolan. Margaret's jacket frock of blue lace was topped with a mink coat. Alice exchanges wedding vows with Phil Greene of Swampscott in June, and Mary Jane becomes the bride of Jay O'Connor during the same month.

Flowered Crepe

Mrs. Frank O'Donnell's black velvet dinner gown was topped with an ermine cape and her sisters-in-law, Mildred and Grace O'Donnell, were members of her party. Mildred wore a picturesque gown of salmon taffeta, and Grace, who was escorted by John Barry of Cambridge, chose flowered crepe.

Watching the shifting scene from her balcony table were Mrs. Timothy Feeny and her party, Mrs. Gerald Ryan, Mrs. William Walsh and John Shanahan. Mrs. Feeny wore a cape of quilted taffeta, and Mrs. Gerald Ryan was most attractive in coral satin.

Mrs. George Pyne outclassed all others . . . her orange satin ensemble was very smart and was topped by a waist-length cape of silver fox. Mary Herrick wore an equally chic frock of white printed crepe.

Quite a delegation came down from Worcester . . . Mrs. John Foley, mother of Mrs. Sheldon Daly, wore a tunic of green lame, her daughter, Betty, was smart in rasberry crepe and Anne McLaughlin's shell pink sheer was edged with mink.

Mrs. John F. Fitzgerald, Jr' of Milton, the center of a group of young married set, poked fun at the Copley-Plaza remains the gals who wear sox in formal parties. She chose a print dinner dress . . . a most becoming ensemble. Mrs. Paul Rugoa white sheer was edged with gold sequins and Mrs. John Cremmen was lovely in pale pink.

Mary Feeny was gowned in polka dot satin sashed in brown velvet and Marie Barry's black crepe was attractive with her blonde bob. Mary Frances Murpay motored in from Marlboro. Others in her group were Catherine Barry who wore an Alice blue gown, and Margaret O'Neill whose blue net had a matching cape of ruffles.

Among the college set were Clare O'Brien in white crepe, Kathleen Field of South Boston, her pink sheer studded with diamente, Kay Bates of Salem and Marie Phelan of Newton who enjoyed the concert with Carl Blakely, a Holy Cross sophomore.

Flynn-McGann Ceremony

The bride, who wore a princess gown of white lace and carried a bridal bouquet of roses and gardenias, was given in marriage by her brother, Patrick A. McGann. Mass was celebrated by Francis L. Phelan, S. T. L. chancellor of Archdiocese of Boston and Rev. Edward Murray, D. D. was the officiating clergyman.

Mrs. James Grimes was her sisters only attendant. She was gowned in peach taffeta and carried a nosegay of flowers.

Best man was Francis Dailey of Medford and the group of ushers was headed by Edwin F. Collins. Others included Dr. Arthur Ronan, Thomas J. McGann and Joseph F. McGann.

After a reception to the immediate families at Longwood Towers, Dr. and Mrs. Flynn left for a cruise to the West Indies. On their return the bridal couple will make their home in Wellesley.

Mrs. Flynn is the daughter of Mrs. Michael J. McGann of Watertown. Dr. Flynn was graduated from Boston College, Harvard Medical School and is a member of the staff of Peter Bent Brigham Hospital. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Flynn of Somerville.

ATTRACTIVE MARGARET YOUNG of Medford was escorted by Timothy Feeny of Medford to the musicale and dance of the Boston Club of Holy Cross.

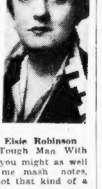
Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson



Elsie Robinson

So you want to know about me? Every day, letters asking—as you ask every columnist—what'm I really like. What's my favorite dish, flower and pet movie hero. N' how many times have I been in love?

All right, Pesty, since you've kept nagging for nigh onto 17 years, I'm going to tell you.

I am, to start with, a woman — not, as so many of you suppose, A Big, Tough Man With Whiskers. So you might as well stop writing me mash notes, Belinda; I'm not that kind of a boy.

Scenically I would never make the Follies, but I do tote acreage. I am five-feet-ten tall, and I lope just like Garbo. But I never "tank I go home," as long as there's a good atory to be told or a good scrap to be fought.

Yes, I talk like I write. It's not an act. I talk that way because I was born to it on my western ranges—and it's the palaver I've always used as gold miner, rancher and general mavrick.

So there's no use asking me "pretty please," to stop using slang. It can't be done, Sister. Slang's part of the setup. And if you want ladylike language, you'd better read "Little Women."

Food? I like it when I happen to think about it. Then I want big, rare beefsteaks, lots of fried onions, hot dogs, barbecued steers and other coarse and revolting diets from which any nice female would cringe with well-bred horror.

Getting back to that how-many-times-in-love question—I started with my first tooth, Dearies, and have been falling continuously and increasingly in love ever since. A few of them died. Most of them survived, though badly dented. At 52 I am still going strong and expect, at 92, to have struck my stride.

In case you are shocked by this casual treatment of romance, it is probably good for you. Chances are, if you cut out the heartthrobs and do a little more real living, you'll be 90 per cent more valuable as a citizen—and far less of a pain-in-the-neck to your associates.

Ambition? I never had any—except to be the mother of a dozen babies. God took the only one I ever had—but gave me you to mother in his place.

So there stands Elsie AS IS on her ranges—cartridge belt, spiked boots, trousers and flannel shirt. But what of it? Actually, it doesn't matter in the least what Elsie is like. The only thing that matters is this—

That I am you. That because I have lived so many lives, I have lived your life also. Because I have known so much poverty, hardship, fury, grief, rebellion and anger, hope and despair—and, above all, because I have made such a goshawful fool of myself so many times—I am able at least to serve you in your tears, your rebellions and humiliation.

That is the only thing that counts about me, or this column which I write. This and one other fact which, day or night, never fails—

I LOVE YOU, MY DEAR. I NEED YOUR LOVE IN RETURN. GIVE IT TO ME.

Many Plan Cocktail Parties

Almost every afternoon the basin is dotted with a few white sails, the Harvard and Tech oarsmen are out in their sculls and shells, and this evening the rythmic strains of dance music will float across the waters in front of the Cambridge Boat Club for the members are having their spring supper dance.

Many Cambridge hostesses are entertaining at cocktail parties before taking their guests on to the dance. Miss Emma Lane Ward is entertaining a large group at the Lowell street home of her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Magruder, who are now vacationing in Bermuda.

At Miss Ward's party will be Dr. and Mrs. Dudley Merrill, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Pratt, Dr. and Mrs. Carl Ekstand, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ind. Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Darwin E. Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Duane, Jr., Charles Sturgis, Mrs. Albert H. Harris 2d, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Warner, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Brockunier, Miss Elizabeth Farnham, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pitcher, Edward S. Read, Walter Haigh, Dr. Pelham Glazier, John Watson, John M. Mulligan and Curtis Pinkey.

Miss Jane Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. J. Howard Wing, and Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Morton, Jr., are also giving cocktail parties. Mrs. Albert H. Harris 2d, is chairman of the committee which has planned the dance and working with her are Miss Ward, Mrs. Calvert Magruder, Mrs. C. Douglas Krumbhaar, Mrs. Dudley Merrill and Mrs. Harry S. New England Police Stories

'ONE WAY ROAD'

As Told by Ace Crime Reporters

Killer Kaminski Twice Escaped Prison After Slaying Guard

This is the 77th in a series of true detective stories from New England police annals being presented daily by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

By FRANCIS P. "TIP" O'NEILL

It was Sunday, and, in the chapel of Hampden county jail at Springfield, prisoners were singing hymns. Not among the singers, however, were young Alec Kaminski and his escape-attempt partner, Paul Wargo.

Those two were crouched, hardly daring to breathe, behind a pile of lumber in the jail workshop. Strains of church music, from the chapel, came faintly to their ears as the workshop door opened.

Through the door, on a routine patrol, came Guard Merritt W. Hayden. He was humming to himself air and words of the chapel service selections:

"Lead, Kindly Light!
"Amid th' encircling gloom,
"Lead Thou me—"

He never finished the line!

With the silent ferocity of wild animals, escaping prisoners Kaminski and Wargo were at his throat.

Kaminski was wielding, as a club, a short billy of two-by-three-inch studding.

No alarm had yet been given.

From the chapel, across the empty jail yard, still came the measured cadences of the old hymn:

"Keep Thou my feet!
"I do not ask to see

Rips Keys Loose

As Kaminski, peering out the workshop door, sized up the situation, Wargo swiftly searched the prostrate guard, found his keys and ripped them loose from their belt chain.

Then the two prisoners, keeping in the shadow of the jail wall, slipped furtively toward the locked gate of the watch-tower from which Guard Hayden had come.

Opening this gate with the stolen keys, they mounted the stairs within, reached an upper window, swung themselves out and dropped from the top of the wall to the ground below—and freedom!

Not until long after they had raced to the nearby river bank and had disappeared in a patch of underbrush did the big jail stir into action with clanging of gongs and shrilling of whistles.

Abruptly halted, too late, were the chapel services as the roll-call revealed Wargo and Kaminski missing. Jail authorities learned hardly whom to blame for Guard Hayden's fractured skull.

Hayden, himself, was past caring. He died, a few hours later, leaving a widow and three children.

"Heat" On

Now, of course, the "heat" was on, in earnest, for fugitives Kaminski and Wargo. The latter was caught within 24 hours, still in the vicinity of Springfield. But Kaminski, the brains of the escape partnership, remained missing, as days grew into weeks.

A check-up of Kaminski's record showed him to have been serving only a six-months sentence in Hampden county jail. That was the sort of easy "rap" a man, in cell-block parlance, "oughter be able to do standin' on his head."

But it hadn't been mere distaste for his Massachusetts jail cell which had impelled 23-year-old Kaminski to the desperate break, involving murder.

Both Kaminski and Wargo had been convicted, in Springfield, of unlawful possession of revolvers. And those revolvers, unfortunately, had been acquired in the course of a Connecticut burglary for which the Wargo-Kaminski partners had been promised a 20-year sojourn in Wethersfield state prison.

Before coming to Massachusetts in the first place, they had had experience in Wethersfield, having each served a five-year term there.

They didn't want to go back.

That was why, Wargo explained, they had tried to do their escaping at Hampden County jail, where escaping was supposed to be comparatively simple.

Unforeseen, of course, had been the killing of Guard Hayden. Kaminski had only meant to silence him temporarily—permanently!

Now the Massachusetts charge against Wargo and Kaminski was murder, and before it was time for Wargo to go on trial on this indictment, Kaminski was back to face the music with him.

Caught in Virginia

Kaminski's capture had been effected in Lynchburg, Va., where he had been caught in a burglary, a comparison of fingerprints quickly establishing his identity.

The escape of Kaminski and Wargo from Hampden County jail had been on October 22, 1933.

Their trial for murder began in February, 1934.

Kaminski was then 23 years old, Wargo 27. It looked as if they were due for one brief week or two of mild notoriety, after which they would exit from the public scene, either via the electric chair or via life imprisonment at Charlestown.

As things happened, however, Kaminsky was just beginning, not finishing, his career as a maker of newspaper headlines.

He got his name on the front pages, of course, when he and Wargo faced a Hampden County jury for the slaying of Guard Hayden.

But "Kaminski" leaped into early big type, for the first time, when 25-year-old John Kaminski, brother of murder-defendant Alec, came into superior court at Springfield in the role of "walking arsenal," carrying two loaded revolvers, two dynamite bombs and two daggers.

Hurls Bomb

In a mad effort to free the two prisoners who were on trial, brother John Kaminski hurled one of his bombs into the crowded courtroom, then pulled a revolver from his pocket and started shooting.

Luckily for everybody concerned, the bomb, constructed of dynamite sticks, buckshot, old automobile parts and a doorknob, failed to explode.

Sheriff David K. Manning, who had just escorted Judge Nelson P. Brown from the bench, grappled with John Kaminski and overpowered him, after being shot in the leg.

As a result of this fracas, Hampden county jail had to dust out a cell for a second Kaminski.

Brother John, the "walking arsenal," eventually was sentenced to state prison for a term of from 21 to 25 years, after being convicted on an assortment of charges ranging from unlawful possession of firearms to bomb throwing with intent to murder.

$100 Week Guard

On March 9, 1934, the jury found Kaminski guilty of first degree murder and Wargo guilty of second degree murder.

Wargo was immediately sentenced to a life term at Charlestown state prison. He was duly fingerprinted—and he is there today, safely out of mischief and out of the newspapers.

Kaminski, however, wasn't done with making headlines. When the time came for him to be sentenced to the electric chair, Judge Brown was busy with the trial of Abraham Faber and the Millen brothers at Dedham.

In consequence, Kaminski continued to be confined in Hampden county jail at Springfield, in spite of objection raised by Sheriff Manning who was spending $100 a week of the county's money to keep a special guard over the convicted killer.

On the night of September 17, 1934, the jail officer who was sitting at the door of Kaminski's cell had what he later admitted to have been a "drowsy spell."

While he was asleep, Kaminski wrenched loose one of his cell door's steel bars, through which he had previously gawed.

With this bar, the prisoner bent apart two other bars, making room for himself to squeeze out of his cell.

In some manner, unexplained to this day, he picked the lock of an inch-ends-a-half steel door, leading to the jail bakeshop.

There he opened, a few minutes after midnight, brandishing a loaded revolver, obtained from a source which also remains unexplained.

With the gun, Kaminski forced a bakeshop guard to stand by, helpless, while he produced a hacksaw and cut his way through the bars of the bakeshop window.

Out of the window, then, Kaminski went, dropping 12 feet to the jail yard, scaling an 18-foot drainpipe to the top of the jail wall, finally dropping 20 feet to the ground outside.

He was hatless, coatless, clad in jail uniform—and was barefoot!

Since Kaminski's home was at New Britain, Ct., and since Connecticut had been the field of his early exploits, it was naturally in that direction that the chase first turned.

There was labor trouble in Connecticut at that time, trouble which entailed unusual demands upon the Connecticut state police.

Therefore Major Frank L. Nichols of the Connecticut state constabulary invited Massachusetts Commissioner of Public Safety Paul G. Kirk to send a squad of his own officers over the state line to lend a hand in the Kaminski search.

As man-hunts go, that was a dandy. Airplanes were used. Blood-hounds were used. Finger-print experts followed Kaminski's alleged trail from burglarized safe to burglarized safe, from robbed bank to robbed bank, from farm-house kitchen to farmhouse kitchen, from stolen car to stolen car.

Bag Falls Open

When he was eventually arrested—as almost all fugitive killers are arrested—it was by sheer accident.

The New York-to-Albany bus-line, in 1934, had a transfer station at Kingston, 33 miles from Albany. There passengers, with through tickets, changed from one vehicle to another.

Left behind at the transfer station by some unidentified passenger, on the night of November 10, 1934, was a small, square black travelling case, about the size of a woman's overnight bag.

This travelling case was heavy and of cheap construction. By chance, or perhaps as a result of some checkroom attendant's curiosity, it fell open. In it were a loaded .38 caliber revolver, two pairs of gloves, one pair of them bloodstained—and a neat little set of burglar's tools!

The Albany bus terminal soon received a telephone inquiry. A man's voice described the forgotten bag, thanked the management for holding it, said the owner would call for his property.

The bus line executives notified police.

The claimant was Kaminski—although he wasn't using that name! Arrested as a suspicious person and taken to Albany police headquarters, the fugitive killer coolly attempted to deny his identity.

If it hadn't been for his fingerprints, he might almost have got away with the deception.

For the Alec Kaminski of November, 1934, was a very different looking person from the Alec Kaminski of October, 1933.

The youth who had originally escaped from Hampden County jail had been a sandy-haired, freckled-faced, gangling sort of kid, a wide-eyed, pink-cheeked farm boy in appearance.

The man who was taken into custody at Albany was dapper, black-haired, black-eyebrowed, with a John Dillinger moustache and a steel-hard glint in his narrowed eyes.

Alec Kaminski had travelled a long way in a year, figuratively as well as literally.

When he was confronted at the Albany police station, with the incontrovertible proof of his own fingerprints, he grinned a mirthless grin and "came clean."

"All right," he said, "you've got me. I'm Kaminski. You might as well notify my old friend, Sheriff Manning, at Springfield. If you want to do me a favor, let me talk to him over the telephone."

When the Hampden County sheriff was reached, Kaminski told him:

"Hello, sheriff. I pulled a boner. Come on up and get me."

Having been transferred, under heavy guard, to Springfield, the recaptured murderer was stripped and searched.

Saws Hid in Shoes

In the soles of his shoes were found half a dozen fine steel hacksaws. But when he was put, at last, in a cell, in the old "Dungeon," Hampden county jail, authorities were sure that he had neither tools nor weapons.

Not even his lawyer, Attorney Edward L. Benton, was allowed to see Kaminski privately.

Through Sheriff Manning was made public Kaminski's own alleged story of how he effected his escape:

"After getting out of Springfield jail, I made my way on foot across the state line to Thompsonville, Conn. That was the toughest part of the get-away. I didn't even have any shoes.

"At Thompsonville, I broke into a couple of camps and got some clothes. Then I stole an automobile from a garage and helped myself to gasoline out of parked trucks.

At Manchester I burglarized a safe, then I went to New York, found friends, and stayed under cover. Then was when I dyed my hair and my moustache.

"I never would have got caught, if I hadn't been damned fool enough to go back after that travelling bag at Albany. But I wanted the gun!"

Doomed to Die

After Kaminski's Albany capture, there was no more delay in pronouncing his sentence.

On Nov. 24, 1934, he was doomed in the electric chair by Judge Brown, at Springfield.

After being moved, with unusual precautions, to the death house at Charlestown, he was finally executed on the early morning of February 19, 1935.

Almost to the last, he apparently had hope of a commutation of sentence—or perhaps of escape!

The prison chaplain, after the execution, made public an article which Kaminski had written at the age of 21, when he was about to leave the Connecticut state prison at Wethersfield.

Intended for the prison paper, the article had not appeared in print.

Yet, in writing it, young Kaminski had promised himself:

"If I fall in my object never again to commit a crime, it will not be without having tried most earnestly."

He had written further:

"Life will be doubly sweet to me, when I do go outside. I have promised myself that I will see beauty never obvious to me before. I will know joys of living previously impossible of realization. For five long years, I have never seen a starlit sky, a tree, green grass, or an open field of hay. But that is all over now.

"I will live again, as I have never lived before. Oh, God, it is wonderful to be alive."

He wrote that, when he was 21. At 23, he was dead—in the electric chair!

Tomorrow in the Boston Evening American the true detective series will continue with another thrilling New England crime story.

Sisters-in-Law Plan House Fight

Roxbury today faces the possibility that two sisters-in-law will contest for the State House seat left vacant by the death of Representative John L. Gleason.

Announcement of the widow that she would run for the office in September came last night, a month after Mrs. Mildred Harris, sister of the late representative, declared she would seek election to the post.

Stenographer Wins $25 Award on Holdup Tip

By THE NEWSTIP EDITOR

Shreve, Crump and Lowe, Boston jewelers located at one of the important corners in the city, Boylston and Arlington streets, was the scene of an attempted holdup.

A stenographer telephoned the Boston Evening American so promptly that this paper was able to be the first on the street with the story.

Our reward was the knowledge of a fast job well done.

Second prize of $10 was divided between to clever tipsters.

WINS $5

Half, $5, was given to a Brockton woman who learned that a birthday party which had been planned for Mary Evelyn Burke who gives in spite of Evelyn's death at a Boston hospital.

The other half went to a Wintrop youth who telephoned the information from Gil Dobie, former Cornell University grid mentor, was injured during scrimmage at Boston College.

Third prize of $5, too, was split, $3 going to a photographer who snapped pictures of the wreckage of stolen car at Framingham.

He snapped the pictures and rushed them to the office.

The rest, $2, goes to a Mattapan housewife who tipped us that a doctor was called to deliver a child in an automobile parked near his home.

OTHER WINNERS

In addition there were the usual 10 prizes of $1 each to:

A clerk, who tipped us about a man who found and returned to the Harvard Trust in Cambridge $5000 in gold certificates.

A salesman who tipped us on the name of the company and of the pilot in the transport plane crash off Port-of-Spain, Trinidad.

A mechanic who gave us first information on a holdup which netted the bandit $100.

FROWLER TIP

A Dorchester housewife who tipped us on a prowler who frightened two girls.

A salesman who tipped us on the capture of three payroll bandits in Bowdoin square.

An unemployed man who tipped us on the escape of a man from the custody of a Somerville police officer in the corridor of East Cambridge courthouse.

A railroad man who tipped us the tie-up in Braintree railroad yards after two freight trains jumped the rails.

$30 A WEEK

There it is—$50 in cash, the weekly award to the first persons in with good newstips. The prizes are paid every single week, and are paid to the FIRST persons who telephone in the news.

It doesn't require any reportorial ability to recognize the foregoing prize-winning stories as news. And it doesn't require much capital to try for a prize, the cost of a phone call.

Silk Jersey and Linen Batiste Hailed by Congress

WHEN YOU "let the dance floor feel your leather" this summer, you should really let yourself go—and forget the usual standbys in favor of some fabric that's brand new!

Like the two new arrivals that captured the fancy of the Fashion Congress—slinky silk jersey, or a linen batiste with the texture of linen and sheerness of batiste and crush resistant to boot!

A Paisley pattern, with the old peacock blue and rich greens and crimsons of ancient Persian stuffs, makes a ravishing thing of the silk jersey above. For all its exquisite freshness, it's the sort of frock that won't quail when you choose the end of a yacht club dock for a seat, and will pack like a washcloth.

Lipstick red linen batiste, actually crush-resisting, is in frivolous mood—and, yes, in a flirtatious one as well, with its flip pleated edgings, sleeveless jacket edged with pleating, and fishtail train. White daisies line up all over it. Miss Carolyn Pierce, Milton debutante, models both frocks.

For shopping information on either Fashion Congress winner, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A spectator at a none-too-expert game of Contract will be forced, however reluctantly, to the conclusion that penuriousness is far too common a human trait.

He will see players hold on to Aces and Kings in a death grip, determined not to be cheated out of a trick, no matter what the cost.

In today's hand, East had a miser's affection for his King and Queen of spades and could not bear to part with them. As a result, he succeeded in winning tricks with both honors—at the cost of a vulnerable game!

North, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

North: ♠ A 7 ♡ A 6 5 ♢ A K 10 6 4 ♣ A J 2

West: ♠ J 9 8 5 3 ♡ 8 7 4 ♢ 9 5 ♣ 8 7 3

East: ♠ K Q 2 ♡ Q J 3 ♢ Q 8 3 ♣ 10 9 6 4

South: ♠ 10 6 4 ♡ K 10 9 3 ♢ 7 2 6 ♣ K Q 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♢	Pass	1 N T	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the five of spades, dummy played low and East's Queen won the trick. Delighted that the Ace was now blank in dummy to permit the establishment of his King, East now returned the deuce of spades!

The diamonds were cleared and East, on lead with the Queen, now cashed his precious spade King. After that, he looked around for more tricks, but couldn't find a single one. The contract was fulfilled with an extra trick.

The most superficial thinking on East's part would have saved the game. It should have been obvious that one spade trick more or less was of no consequence: the important point was that unless West had at least a five card suit to the Jack, defense was hopeless.

The diamond suit would obviously be established with the loss of only one trick and dummy's clubs suggested two or three tricks in that suit.

The unblock of the spade suit should have been the only consideration in East's mind—but he bated to slaughter his own King!

CHAPTER XXVI

Better think that!

His artistic sense revelled in the beautiful Florentine hangings of the salon and the priceless tapestry that ran clear across one wall.

The very chair he sat on had come from a palace of the De Medici! The present-day world faded, and he was transported back through the long centuries to the glowing capital of Tuscany.

The woman opposite him took on a strange beauty. Her face seemed to come near, and then to recede. Her milky skin had an unearthly radiance.

She was a creation of Michael Angelo, the great Florentine painter.' The wine was in his head. To think was to speak . . .

He Couldn't Refuse

"You look—like Beatrice—Dante's Beatrice," he said thickly, for he was suddenly greatly moved.

"If I can inspire you to great deeds, then to you I shall be Beatrice," said Lorraine, and her voice caressed him like the notes of a violincello in some lonely forest.

She rose from her end of the table and came to him, putting her two hands in his.

Still less did he comprehend a woman of the calibre of Lorraine.

At this moment she seemed to him the epitome of all that was spiritual and gracious. He was still enwrapped in the vision and the glamour of the city of the De Medicis.

The centuries had rolled back, and in her shimmery gown before him was standing a white-skinned beauty from Old Florence, offering him help and inspiration.

He would be an ingrate were he to repulse her. He didn't want to repulse her. The wine was in his head, and as he held her hands it was all he could do to keep from kneeling at her feet.

For it was not only the wine that had affected him, and the sensuous beauty of his surroundings, but a nebulous something that emanated from the strange eyes of the woman, as though her very soul were glowing in the green depths.

Those eyes drew him, held him. He rose. Their faces were almost on a level, for Lorraine was tall.

"I want nothing better than that you should be my inspiration," he said slowly, stammering a little because of the inexplicable emotion that had gripped him.

Lorraine willed that he should kiss her, that he was emotionally stirred, as she had intended.

But something held him back. Was it because he was married? Was it because he thought she was far above him?

Joel was old indeed, in comparison with Jimmy Randolph. She loathed the memory of Ramon, the effete. . . . She saw Jimmy's lips tremble, and an added thrill went through her that she could so stir him. It was like playing on some exquisitely sensitive instrument.

What would have happened had not the butler entered the little salon at that moment, Lorraine was afterwards to wonder.

Simes was a fool. She must get rid of him. He had no tact.

Like a schoolboy caught in wrong doing, Jimmy dropped her hands instantly, and his face that had been so pale and strained a moment ago was suffused by a dark flush.

He stepped back awkwardly so that his elbow caught his hitherto untouched water-goblet of ruby cutglass which fell to the polished floor and smashed into fragments.

She laughed it off, knowing that the spell was broken. "Are you superstitious?" she asked.

"Pardon me, madame, but a broken glass, unlike a broken mirror, is a lucky omen," Simes volunteered as he collected the smashed ruby pieces.

"Then your pantry has a lucky angel for you're a demon when it comes to breakages," she said tartly, for she was annoyed with Simes. "Put that tray out on the terrace. We'll have coffee and liqueurs out there," she added sharply.

What Did He Know?

The blundering butler certainly must be dismissed. Just how much had he seen that could be construed as compromising when he first entered the little salon . . .? And how much did he know about herself and Ramon . . .? Would he be vindictive . . .?

"This is the young man of whom I spoke to you on the telephone, Wallace," she said briskly; "he's extremely anxious to take a three months' course in Paris just as soon as your committee can arrange it. I know there are plenty of applicants for the exchange, but a word from you will carry weight."

"Ah yes," commented Mr. Briscoe ponderously, putting his finger-tips together and staring over his glasses at the good-looking young man.

"Mr. Randolph, I understand from our hostess that you won a scholarship to our institution, and that you've entered the lists for the $10,000 prize the backers of the forthcoming Exposition are offering for the finest plans for a building to be put up in the Exposition, said prize being open only to beginners—to those who have not yet joined the ranks of professional architects."

"That's so," said Jimmy nervously.

Mr. Briscoe deliberately drained his coffee cup, set cup and saucer on a small glass table beside him on the terrace, and nodded his head.

"Apart from the fact that your achievement to date warrants the exchange, I have a great respect for Mrs. Vandaveer's opinion," he said unctuously. "You may consider the matter as good as settled."

"I'm much obliged to you, sir, and to Mrs. Vandaveer also." Jimmy rejoined politely, though he was inwardly amazed that he felt no elation at the decision. He had longed to go to Paris for this course, but now he felt curiously apathetic about it—almost in fact depressed about it. Could this feeling have anything to do with Liana Waters?

Almost directly afterward Lorraine was summoned to the telephone by Simes. The voice of her husband informed her that he would be detained till considerably after midnight by a business meeting, and she was not to wait up for him. This news pleased her and gave her an idea.

To break the awkward pause when Simes had gone, Lorraine started showing Jimmy the treasures in the room for, since dinner was ended, there was no point in going back to her chair.

The light in his eyes was not for her, this time, but for the beautiful mosaics and oil paintings, and the wonderful old Florentine books in their rare bindings and rare typescript.

Importance of Taking Rests

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

A friend and I were discussing old age. My friend pointed out that relaxation and adequate rest were the most important requirements of long life.

This is true. Persons who do not take sufficient relaxation in early life rarely live to enjoy the full span of years.

It is common to compare the human body to a machine. Everybody understands that to have a machine properly function it must be well lubricated and cared for regularly. Defective parts must be replaced by new and sturdy structures.

The human body is a complex machine, differing from any machine that has been made by man. The human body is a delicate machine, of course, but it is made up of thousands and thousands of living cells.

Each cell, no matter how tiny it is, has a definite function to perform. If one cell becomes diseased, or is unable to perform its job, the other cells must take over the work. But if all of the cells become fatigued so that efficiency is decreased, that complex machine known as the body suffers serious damage.

PETERMAN'S DISCOVERY

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Feminine Girl Always Marries Before Her Mannish Sister

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

I dislike mannish women as much as I do sissy men. And most people agree with me, I'm sure.

The girl who wears tweeds may be a "good pal" to a man, but her sister who likes frills and permanents will marry the man every time.

My advice to all girls is BE YOURSELVES. Don't try to look like your brother. When you buy coats, hats and dresses, be sure they are feminine.

Fashions in automobiles may change from year to year. Tastes may be altered with the passing of time, but one thing always remains the same. That is the mysterious thing that a man admires in a woman.

So, girls, if you want to be married, don't try to be men. A felt hat may attract an effeminate man, whom no woman wants. But the sister with the modish chapeau and frilly gown will wear the he-man's diamond.

These remarks were inspired by J. D., who writes me this interesting letter:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Why can't I get a boy friend? I am strong and athletic and fairly good looking. I enjoy sports and never fail to attend a baseball game, boxing bout or horse show when I get the opportunity. I can talk a man's language. In fact, I know more about baseball than my brothers do.

Although men seem to like to talk with me, they never think of inviting me to dances and parties. What is wrong with me?

J. D.

MY DEAR GIRL:

Your trouble is that you are trying to be a man. You say you "can talk a man's language." That's your principal fault in the eyes of John and Henry and Tom. No man wants a wife who acts like his brother.

If you take my advice you'll talk less about baseball and more about the dress you are knitting.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of 18, very much in love with a boy who is a freshman in college. We have been going together steadily for a year and would like to marry. Recently I discovered I am going to be a mother.

My problem is driving me to distraction. I don't dare tell my parents. And my friend says his father and mother will disown him if they find out.

Is there any way I could have the child without our parents learning about it? JANE.

MY DEAR JANE:

You should tell your mother right now. You shouldn't lose a single minute. And, no matter what happens, you should insist that this young man marry you immediately.

I can understand your friend's fears. In all probability they are justified. But his parents can never make him suffer as much as you will suffer if you have the misfortune to become an unwed mother.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My husband's father died just before we were married. As my husband was the sole support of his mother, I went to live in her home. For five years I have been kind and tolerant, but I am rapidly losing my self-control.

I started out by liking and respecting my motherlin-law. And I have done everything to make her happy and comfortable. But she doesn't show the slightest appreciation. Do you think we would be wiser to get a home of our own? MRS. H. R.

MY DEAR MRS. H. R.:

Marriage is always difficult when a couple lives with in-laws. Every husband and wife should endeavor to have a home of their own, free from the interference of relatives.

In your case, it would be difficult to move away, leaving your mother-in-law without support. I certainly would not advise you to do anything so cruel.

Rather, I would advise you to resolve to make the best of an unfortunate situation. Don't quarrel with your mother-in-law and, above all, don't make her the Big Interest in your life.

Get interested in social activities. Attend the theater frequently and invite friends to your home. If you can succeed in getting interested in things outside of your home, you will find your mother-in-law far less annoying and far more understanding.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX,

I am a young girl 19 years of age and I am not allowed out of the house at all. Sunday morning I go to church at 9 o'clock and return at 10. If I am not on time, my father is always looking up and down the street to see if I am in sight.

All the other girls I know go out evenings, but I am compelled to go to bed at 9:30. Honestly, I think some girls have more freedom in prison than I have at home.

What can I do? ALICE.

DEAR ALICE:

If I were you, I'd invite young men to my home. There is no reason in the world why your parents should have such little confidence in you.

Don't fight with your father and mother. Wait until they are both in a happy mood. Then tell them you want a reasonable amount of freedom, that you want to be like other girls.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a girl a few years my senior. I know she loves me. Unfortunately this girl has a husband who refuses to give her a divorce. Do you think we have a right to run away and later marry when she gets her freedom?

HOPELESS.

MY DEAR SON:

If the girl has half a brain, she will stick to her husband. And if you have even a fraction of that sense, you'll go out and try to get a single girl.

Happiness does not come from theft, cheating and running away. Love that endures must be founded on honesty, respect and a clean past. For you and this girl to run away would be to bargain for lives of misery and mutual hate.

No real man ever thinks of stealing another's wife. Only a cad does that. And, dear boy, don't start life by acting a cad.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a boy of 18, not hard to look at, dress neatly and act like a gentleman most of the time. But no matter how hard I try, I can't get a girl to look at me.

Tell me, Miss Fairfax, what is the trouble with me? Does a fellow have to dance and own a car to be popular with the girls?

N. B.

MY DEAR SON:

A car and the ability to dance help.

Personally, I don't think it would do you a bit of harm to learn to dance. It's good exercise and lots of fun. And, when you can afford it, you ought to buy a low-priced automobile.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

FIGURES were gay, slim and svelte in the 1936 Easter parade, and if you are out of step with fashion it is time for your spring figure tonic. There is a freshness about April that awakens incentive to be at our best.

In starting your figure program, make a careful analysis of your problems. If you need to lose six inches off your hips, but develop your chest—don't diet.

Take your figure tonic in a gym suit, for chunky hips and a thick waist are so slightly affected by diet that the measure is all out of proportions in the results. It's exercise for you!

Not all figure problems are alike. You may be normal weight with bulges, or underweight with hips. You may be overweight generally, or overweight just in spots—or both. Whatever your silhouette worries, a program has been designed for your figure, Madame.

In the daily column, balanced low calorie menus are given for those who need to lose weight. Specific exercises are planned for those who need to lose inches. Should you wish to lose both weight and inches, combine the calorie method with exercise. High calorie menus and special weight-gaining material are included for the underweights who desire to exchange their angles for curves.

The figure-proportioning exercise series begins with the general and stretching sets, and later deals with all the big and little bulges in their improper order—twin chins, dowager's hump, rounded shoulders, flabby arms, over-or-under developed bust, pudgy waistline, protruding abdomen, cushioned hips and lumpy thighs.

Don't neglect your figure another day! Beginners on the program should send for the Fruit Regime, given in the leaflet "Dodging the Calories," if you need to lose weight, and for the leaflet, "General Exercise—to Keep You Trim and Fit as a Fiddle," to give your better measurements.

If you wish to obtain either or both of the leaflets mentioned in this article, send stamped addressed envelope with your request.

By DONNA GRACE

Every girl has a right to be beautiful and it is her duty to be as good looking as nature and artificial aids will permit her to be.

The girl who is not interested in making herself attractive has no charm and really lacks intelligence.

We are judged by our appearances, not only when we are well groomed and may have a sense of satisfaction with ourselves, but at all times. When we know that we are being appraised and criticized from the moment we step out of our home until we are back again in its tolerant and friendly atmosphere, is it not just plain good sense to present ourselves at our best at all times?

The girl who neglects to do the things that will improve her appearance deserves more severe censor than the ambitious young lady who puts on too much make-up. The made-up girl may not know the correct methods, but her pride and efforts to look pretty are very commendable.

There will never be any substitute for a daily morning bath. Cleanliness, we must know, is the first beauty attribute.

The girl who uses soap and water to cleanse her face should do her very thorough cleansing before she goes to bed, but she must use a wash cloth or sponge and plenty of cool water for her morning cleansing and vitalizing of the skin.

The eyes, too, need a dip. Their little bathtub is the eye cup. Let them dip in and sparkle as only clean eyes do sparkle.

Take whatever method you prefer, but be sure that you have thoroughly cleansed your face and neck before you apply any make-up.

There is no girl so perfect that she cannot be improved by some kind of make-up. Some young girls who are still in their teens may not need it, but girls over 20 certainly do.

Face powder will always give the skin a soft, refined finish and it really protects it from the smoke and grime that is always about the large cities.

There are, as we know, some exceptions to all rules of beauty treatments and make-up. When one has a very sensitive skin, it is sometimes advisable not to use soap at all, and as much as we love the cleanliness and satisfaction that goes with a soap and water bath we find it will irritate some skins.

This type of skin can be made firm and hardy, however, with a regular routine of fresh air and a little exposure to the sun.

The sun bath, however, and even sun lamps may be too drastic. A gradual exposure is the way to begin to protect such a type against any bad reaction. Sun oils are necessary for protection, and the first exposure is always for only a few moments.

Cleansing of this supersensitive skin may be quite satisfactorily accomplished with a good cleansing cream and followed by ice cold firming applications.

Given In Marriage

By ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 629

AT Mary's laughing, but wholly earnest appeal to hide her and Noel somewhere until the very minute of the box opening because Mrs. Arlen had just arrived, Marion sprang to her feet.

Avis was obviously sulky, and realized the reason for it when I had scanned her appearance. The summons to come over, evidently acted upon by Mr. Veritzen in short order, had given her little time for makeup, and she distinctly unattractive. Only her beautiful hair—honey-colored and curly—redeemed her appearance.

"Dear Mrs. Graham!" she pounced upon me as soon as I entered the room. "Uncle Phil dragged me away before I had time to comb my hair or lace my shoes properly. I'm a mess, mayn't I go upstairs to your room and primp a bit?"

"I'll be a little mouse," she simpered, and fairly scurried out of the room. I turned to welcome Mrs. Arlen, and caught a terrifying fragment of something which Philip Veritzen was saying to Lillian.

"The entrance to that road from which that even more difficult one diverts to the farm," he finished.

VERITZEN'S WARNING

"You're sure the rear window was cut out?" she asked, and the query sent a shiver down my back, for I had read of the significance of cut out rear windows and the facility with which machine guns could be trained out of them.

"Yes," Mr. Veritzen replied. "I am very sure. I am also pretty certain that I saw the glint of metal, which, of course, might or might not be weapons."

"Just a second," she said and rushed toward the kitchen. I followed her just in time to see her open a window and hear her call shrilly:

"Jim! Come to the house as quickly as you can. Run!!"

"Quick! Katie and Jim," she said. "Go round this floor and see that every shutter is locked securely. Are the cellar windows fast?"

"Every vun," Katie returned, and we reeled on her assurance, for imaginative Katie, reveling in the hars we put upon the cellar windows during the siege of the farm house by the Chinese trying to kill Lea Chow, never leaves them unbarred.

TO RESCUE EDITH!

"Can't we help," Ronald and Bob asked, jumping up from the table.

"We need something to help work off this breakfast," Bob added, and Lillian nodded, but I caught her arm.

"Edith and Harriet are in the bungalow," I said, "and Mrs. Tiger will be coming over in a few minutes."

"Good Lord!" Lillian ejaculated, and dashed to the door.

"Bob, Ronald, Jim!" she said. "Come with me to the bungalow. Marion, go upstairs and tell Johnson to telephone Mrs. Tiger not to come over, Carolyn, tell my husband to bring one of the men and come to the back immediately. Madge, watch out and be ready to signal us. If the coast is clear, we'll rush back, if not, we'll have to stay there.

Martha Lee School Holds Graduation

This week on Tuesday evening and Wednesday afternoon the Martha Lee Homemakers' School of the Boston Evening American is holding the graduation party of its winter term.

This class began February 11 and 12 and has been held each Tuesday evening and Wednesday afternoon for ten weeks. The classes are of practical interest and are planned to be of help to the beginner in the art as well as the cook of long standing.

At graduation those attending for the first time will receive a diploma and a cook book with a washable cover containing a complete set of indexed recipes. Those attending other than the first time receive the cook book.

It will be a gala party. A fashion show of hand-knit dresses and ensembles will be shown by Mrs. Frances Blatchley of Bernat Yarns. N. T. G. of Broadway fame will be present with Gloria Day and the three Taka Sisters, featured players of his Broadway Heatwave revue now playing at the RKO Boston Theater.

(Boston's own Philip McMahon, 10 years old, who has been entertaining audiences for seven years, will sing for the graduating class. Newcomb F. Thompson, radio editor of the Boston Evening American, will be master of ceremonies.)

At Time's Crossroads

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Once upon a time, there was a commuter who lived somewhere East of Suez, breathing the fragrance of Amoy camphor wood, lulled to sleep by the tides and yet catching the 8:34 every morning and holding down his job in New York.

Edwin C. Hill

Furthermore, he married a Brooklyn girl and took her with him to dwell in a lost century enjoyed in today. And they have three fine children living with them at Time's crossroads. They find romance and they dodge the rent man and the tax collector.

The route is 9W, and not the Gobi trail. You drive about 15 miles north on the Jersey side of the George Washington bridge to Piermont. There, where 9W ducks into the river road, just north of the main part of Piermont, you find a Chinese junk at the river's edge, a 70-foot craft with three 60-foot masts, ox-blood sails and a hull design which has been in use more than 4000 years.

Alfred Nilson, radio engineer, and his family have lived on the junk, sailed on it, reared their children—the oldest is five—for almost six years. Mr. Nilson has made it his home, off and on, for about 12 years. No subdivision lure, no real estate salesman will ever get them to leave. They love their home on the waves, and it is built to last for centuries.

A CHINESE IDEAL

Amoy is an island at the mouth of the Dragon river, between Formosa and Chang-chow, China. From the mainland, there came a Dutch trader and adventurer, one Captain Ward. He prospered and married a high-caste Chinese girl. They had some beautiful children. Captain Ward has pretty much gone native. To own a specially designed Amoy junk is an ambition of rich Chinese comparable to our own day dreams of owning something like Morgan's Corsair.

In the deep woods, Chinese workmen obtained the finest camphor wood timbers for Captain Ward's junk. The rounded planks of Chinese oak and panels of rare wood were prepared. It took years to build it and launch it with ancient ceremony in the muddy downflow of the Dragon River, ready for the Chinese Family Robinson.

The captain was rich not only in money, but also in eager zest and curiosity. He wanted to see the world; he wanted to find a place for raising foxes; he wanted to have a fine food-horse fling all around the world, along with his beautiful wife and their rollicking half-caste children.

The first night out, in a wild gale which stood the boat up on her bows ends, the old Dragon River tossed a dragon right up on the deck. That is, it was a beast which always had passed for a dragon and which had given the river its name. It was a 16-foot python. Captain Ward shot it, and the Amoy—that's the name of the junk—went heaving and pitching out into the Pacific, on the way to Piermont on 9W. That was 1923.

TOO MUCH FOR CREW

It was a bad sailing year in those parts, and the Amoy was battered all over the North Pacific, clear up to the Aleutian Islands. But she never was lost. The Chinese invented the compass about 4000 years ago. The Amoy's compass was installed by a craftsman who had never heard of a gyroscope. It was not until the twelfth century that Europe picked up the Chinese idea.

When the Amoy wallowed down to Vancouver, with the weather still bad, the Chinese crew had had enough and went ashore. Captain Ward and his wife sailed her down to San Francisco. San Francisco white-collar workers who expect to stay put should wear blinders and never go down to Fishermen's wharf.

There young Alfred Nilson, puttering around his lunch hour, looked over the Amoy and got a disturbing whiff of the camphor wood fragrance. He quit his job and signed up as a sailor on the Amoy to sail anywhere, the more uncertain the destination the better.

It was pretty much of a toss-up where they would go, but idling through the Golden Gate, they turned left, and one turn and an-

Captain Ward saw a fox farm he liked, or something equally diverting, and sold the junk to some oyster harvesters. Mr. Nilson had been spoiled for life ashore. He dreamed of his free life on the junk.

Although romantic, he was of thrifty Scandinavian antecedents, so when the opportunity came he was ready to snatch it. He bought the Amoy, moved her up to Sheepshead Bay, got himself a New York job and merged a five-day week into a cycle of Cathay, retaining the best features of each.

LOVE COMES ABOARD

One day the pretty little Flatbush girl came aboard. From then they might have sung, "Some day I'll go aroving with thee, fair maid," but they didn't. Their romance seems to have been quite matter-of-fact with few Kiplingesque trimmings. But at any rate, they soon were married and lived happily on the Amoy ever after. They weathered this tough winter nicely, with a warm galley range and plenty of oil stoves.

Just now, the Amoy is beached for a big job of caulking, preparatory to a summer ramble up the Hudson, to Lake Champlain via the canal, to the Thousands Islands, down the St. Lawrence, out through the Straits of Belvedere and home again on the Atlantic.

The Amoy—don't forget that 600-year-old hull design—can foot it with the best of modern boats. When the Nilsons took a run down to Bermuda, she was only one day behind the fastest racing yacht time. The main cabin is beautifully decorated with Chinese finger-painting. The long nails of the right hand are used for brushes and the heel of the left palm for a palette. There is a beautiful soapstone statue of Kwan-yin.

The trip little Mrs. Nilson, whose first name is Rita, likes to receive guests in a gown of brick red or blue moire silk, but wears slacks when she pipes all hands, including the two-year-old, to holystone the decks or man the dish pan.

Mr. Nilson is a lean, reserved, unassuming man, in his middle thirties, of the scientific cut, as one would expect a radio engineer to be.

There's nothing ostentatiously romantic about any of the Nilsons. They just managed to get a home and make the whole world their backyard. They like it and have a better chance to keep it than most of us mortgage-ridden commuters.

Penny Sale to Aid Carney Hospital

A penny sale to aid the Carney Hospital will be held Friday evening at the Municipal building, Broadway, South Boston.

The Nurses' Alumnae and student body are striving to make this affair a success socially and financially. Mrs. Joseph Driscoll and the Misses Katherine E. Hennessey, Mary McAuliffe, Grace Walsh, Margaret Kelleher and Anne Minton, with a committee of graduate and student nurses and doctors, are on the committee.

Pulls Bell, Dies

Donnelly, according to his wife, rang his front doorbell and apparently lost his clutch on the device, fell down the steps and fractured his skull.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

One of the most interesting persons in the news of today is a five-year-old boy. Interesting not so much for what he has done—like Freddie Bartholomew, say,—but for what he is. He is Charles J. B. Christian of San Francisco, the great great grandson of one Fletcher Christian, the famous mutineer of "The Bounty," a man of whom we know much more than we do of most of the men who sailed the Great South Sea in the latter part of the eighteenth century.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Of course we know a good deal also about his Captain Bligh, but that is because Bligh outlived him and gave testimony about him. Bligh was Captain Cook's navigator, was he not, and later Admiral "Breadfruit" Bligh, whose memories across the years has crystallized with an obloquy it perhaps did not entirely deserve.

You will remember that when Christian and his fellow mutineers set Bligh in an open boat to make his hazardous way many hundreds of miles across the Pacific, the Bounty returned to Tahiti and most of the mutineers resolved to remain there. But Christian and a minority knew that nowhere was safety for them where the British flag flew. They had heard of an island almost beyond the limits of South Sea exploration, called Pitcairn. (One of the Pitcairns fought for the King in America). It had a name and a location on the chart (which turned out to be incorrect) but Christian set out to find it. His last voyage started in September, 1789, and in January, 1790, Christian beached the Bounty, unloaded and burned it. Henceforth Pitcairn was to be his home, with a few of the crew and some native women.

His eldest son he named Thursday October Christian. That boy was the great grandfather from whom young Charles descends in direct line of five generations. Not until 1808 was Pitcairn Island found. By that time many tragedies had occured. In 1793 Christian himself with four white and four native men were massacred by the others in a feud. This left four mutineers alive, all four of whom were dead by 1800 either violently or from natural causes. Adams alone was left, the patriarch of the society, the head of the little colony of women and half-caste children. From these were born the present inhabitants of the islands.

Boy to Take Over Christian's Island

After long legal processes, so far as I can make out, the British Government has confirmed the descendants of these people in their land titles on Pitcairn. And so, one of these days, young Charles Christian and his mother will take the long voyage back to that almost inaccessible dot in the waste of waters of the great South Sea and young Charles will take possession of his great great grandfather Fletcher's find-fall.

I owe this information to a little book which might be called a sequel or postscript to the three famous "Bounty" books by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall. These are, of course, "The Mutiny on the Bounty," itself, "Men Against the Sea," and "Pitcairn Island." In this litle book called "The Tale of a Shipwreck" (Houghton Mifflin Company) James Norman Hall tells how after some years of living in Tahiti with his collaborator, Nordhoff, always looking for a chance ship which should take him to Pitcairn, he at last had a chance to go (alone, unfortunately, since Nordhoff could not accompany him) and actually visited Pitcairn and checked at first hand all the data available for that last tragic chapter of the long saga.

First Hand Knowledge Of Pacific Ocean Life

On the way home he was wrecked on a coral island and was marooned there for a few days, thus gaining a first-hand knowledge of what the Pacific Ocean can do to one. Later he and his partner collaborated on that really sensational tale, "The Hurricane," one of the winter's best sellers.

I do not suppose that young Charles Christian will want to stay very long on Pitcairn Island. But not many boys can claim such an inheritance. And not many boys can see their forebear's famous epic bodied forth on the silver screen as superbly as the Bounty stories was re-enacted for us in our day by Laughton, Gable, and Tone, to say nothing of those dusky beauties, whose originals were the far-off nameless native women in the veins of one of whom flowed the blood of this little boy's great grandfather.

HER MERRY LITTLE SUPPER ENDS IN DEATH BY POISON

Rose Correlli, 20, of Ferry street, Everett, who died as a result of food poisoning today. Her sister and her sister's fiance are also violently ill from apparent food poisoning.

STORE HONORS OLD EMPLOYES

With more than 600 persons present, Jordan Marsh Company employes, whose service totals 14,324 years, were honored last night at the 17th annual banquet of the Quarter Century Club.

Burnelle G. Hawkins, store manager, was toastmaster, and other executives attending included George W. Milton, chairman of the board of directors; Richard Milton, president of the company, and Edward R. Milton merchandising vice president.

Checks for $1000 each and gold buttons were presented to Miss Annie G. Lyons and William H. Stevens, who had just become eligible for membership in the Half Century Club. Norman K. Whitcher, another new member, was unable to be present.

Mr. Hawkins told the gathering that the Quarter Century Club has 401 members while the Half Century Club has 21. There were 43 new members of the former.

A feature of the evening was a picture flashed on a screen behind the speakers' table, showing President Coolidge with George Milton and W. A. Hawkins, retired manager of the store, as they appeared when the first club meeting was held 17 years ago.

"I wish he were our President today," said George W. Milton.

Richard Milton told the gathering that business had been better and Edward Milton gave the members of the two organizations credit for a large share of this improvement. A silent tribute was paid to deceased members and a special message was sent to W. A. Hawkins of Bridgeton, Me., founder of the club.

Food Kills Girl; Two Ailing

POLICE SEIZE MEAT SUPPLY

A 20-year-old Everett girl died today and her sister and a friend are violently ill, apparently from food poisoning, police said.

Less than ten hours after Rose Correlli of Ferry street complained of nausea, she was found dead in bed.

Seize Meat

Police, learning that all had eaten the same meat last night went to a market and seized the remainder on sale.

The mother of the dead girl is Mrs. Alice Correlli, who was away over the holiday.

Giaidina, fiance of Mary Correlli, said that Rose, Mary and he had a light supper of veal and a vegetable salad at 8:30 p. m., and that by 10 o'clock they were all seriously ill.

Youth Collapses

They went to bed with their clothes on, and this morning Giaidina crawled out to see how the others were. He collapsed. Mary heard him fall, staggered out of her room and called Drs. Benjamin Barton and H. V. Ullian.

The doctors summoned police and Associate Medical Examiner Andrew D. Guthrie of Medford, Health Inspector Frederick Sheehan and police made the seizure at the market.

LINCOLN CASE UP TOMORROW

Ouster proceedings against Alexander Lincoln, member of the state board of tax appeals, will be continued tomorrow at 1 p. m. by Governor Curley and the executive council.

The governor announced he has not received the resignation of Mr. Lincoln.

He also said Attorney John P. Feeney had made a tender of appearing gratis for him, the governor, in the suit against the governor which Alexander Lincoln, Boston lawyer, has said he would bring as a result of testimony during a recent hearing on the matter.

Shaun Kelly, Sr., Gets State Post

Shaun Kelly of Richmond, father of Shaun Kelly, Jr., Harvard baseball star, was appointed a member of the state conservation committee to administer the new farm program in Massachusetts, according to announcement today by AAA officials in Washington.

Other Massachusetts committeemen appointed include Phoren L. Warren of Sunderland, Alden Wheeler of Concord, Ralph Haskell, Topsfield and Harold J. Shaw of Sanford.

600 Seek Chance For Film Fame

Future Movie Stars Sign

RUTH KILTON RITA POWELL GERTRUDE READY

Over 600 youths and girls in New England have answered the "movies" call for new talent and the door to film fame will be open for two more days. Light and voice tests will be given and 200 will be given parts in the talking picture to be produced under the sponsorship of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser and the Loew's State and Orpheum theaters. Above are three Boston girls, Ruth Kilton, Rita Powell and Gertrude Ready, who have registered for a part in the film.

CONTEST OPEN TO YOUTH OF N. E.

Only two days remain for young men and women between the ages of 16 and 20 to apply for roles in "It Happened in Boston," talking picture to be produced under the sponsorship of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser and the Loew's State and Orpheum theaters.

Already hundreds of young men and women have applied for parts with Max Allentuck, casting director for the film, at Room 42, Loew's State Theater Building.

Applications close Thursday and no further entrants are to be considered after that time as light and voice tests are then scheduled to start.

So if you are between the age of 16 and 20 and think you have latent motion picture ability, call on Mr. Allentuck as soon as possible and fill out the application blank he will provide.

Casting hours are from 2 to 5 in the afternoon and from 7 to 9 in the evening.

OVER 600 APPLY

Already more than 600 young men and women have applied for the 200 parts to be given out in the picture but no actual selections are to be made until the real competition starts with light and voice tests.

So it is not too late for you if you have not already applied for a part. Visit Room 42 in the State Theater Building today or tomorrow in the afternoon or evening. You will receive the same consideration as those who have already applied.

You may qualify for one of the 10 leading roles. In addition there are 15 lesser parts and 175 extra roles.

REAL OPPORTUNITY

If you qualify you will have the thrill of seeing yourself on Loew's screens in actual moving pictures and don't forget that New York and Hollywood movie executives are to view the picture in the hope of finding someone with screen potentialities.

It's a real opportunity for young people who have always believed they could make good in the movies if they had the chance.

The script of the picture provides a high school theme which is naturally suited for young men and women of the age required of all applicants.

It is the first project of its kind ever to be attempted in Boston and may well provide young men or women with talent a real opportunity to crash the gates of Hollywood.

Curley in Budget Plea to Solons

Governor Curley today appealed to each member of the House in an individual letter, to support his 1936 budget and called a caucus of Democratic members in an effort to whip the "rebels" into line.

In voting on budget items last week a bloc of about 20 Democrats rebelled against his leadership and sided with Republicans in trimming administration allotments.

In his letters to the legislators, the governor declared there was no basis for hinting the state's credit had been impaired. He said $4,000,000 had recently been borrowed at nineteen-twentieths of one per cent interest.

The Democratic caucus was called for the City Club this afternoon. The call was issued in the name of Joseph McGrath, chairman of the Democratic state committee, indicating political pressure would probably be applied.

New York Day by Day

O. O. McIntyre

New York, April 21—There is growing belief that Robert E. Sherwood is sliding into first place as the most distinguished American playwright, even endangering the niche so long occupied by Eugene O'Neil. His dramatic range is wider and his versatility increases.

The enormous popularity of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne is due in a large measure to the successful plays written for them by Sherwood. Notably "Reunion in Vienna." In England and on the continent Sherwood is regarded as the most accomplished of the Yankee playmakers.

He was born in New York and gained his first important recognition when Charles Dana Gibson selected him as editor of Life. On the side he wrote cinema revues for that publication, being the first to handle such critiques in a scholarly fashion. His boon companion was Robert Benchley.

A human Alp, Sherwood is so tall sidewalk crowds usually turn when he passes. He is not aligned with any of the arty cliques and spends much of his time on an English estate for which he sailed after his latest premiere. His hobby is raising dogs, the Scottie being his favorite.

Many believe, incidentally, the Noel Coward's zoom across the theatrical horizon has landed with the skyrocket's customary faint plink. His most recent efforts in London failed to encompass the old zip and his last beast-man play in America was an auspicious flop.

But whatever his destiny, his meteoric rise has rarely been equalled on either side of the Atlantic and any playwright who can give the world a "Cavalcade" is entitled to call it a day.

Graham McNamee, as the radio's most indefatigable straight man, has become one of the six-figured salary earners in his field. And a shining example of the rewards of application. He is reputed in constant rehearsal, and as arching a half hour before each broadcast, the better to perfect himself.

Despite his long experience before the microphone he is not yet calloused to a nervous flutter as he goes on the air.

All good performers, it would seem, suffer the chilling blight of stage fright, no matter how seasoned before the footlights. One of the most acute sufferers was Al Jolson in his stage first nights. He never felt he would be able to make his first entrance. Close friends stood by to cheer and coaxe him and his personal physician was handy.

Once he did lose his voice completely ten minutes before curtain time.

Katharine Cornell is jittery until she speaks a half dozen lines, and Helen Hayes stands in frozen horror until she receives her cue—and rarely has any memory of her first ten minutes at a premiere.

Mrs. Fiske's trembling was visible over the footlights.

Oddly enough, one of the most spectacular targets for stage fright was the rowdy female impersonator, Bert Savoy, whose brand of gutttery jocularity seemed to indicate he would be entirely without sensitiveness. Yet those in the first rows could always hear encouraging asides of his partner, Jay Brennan, to bolster him.

Savoy was glad he wore skirts so the audience could not see his knees in castanet shakes.

Eleventh avenue now has but three of its famous "cow-boys"—the blue-shirted Paul Reveres who gallop the street car tracks ahead of freight trains to warn pedestrians of approach. They ride calico ponies, carry red lanterns and their occupational name is dummy rider. There used to be about two dozen, and several became well known jockeys.

The remaining trio is to carry out the spirit, if not the letter, of an 1850 city ordinance requiring warning when trains are on the way.

Midnight vignette: She stepped out into a patch of brightness from a Radio City doorway, aged, shaky and bewildered. Her son had left her there two hours before on their way home from a movie ostensibly to attend a phone call.

"He's a good boy," she explained, "but sometimes falls in bad company."

And a few moments later he arrived a bit reely and blustering. They walked to the corner, he flailing his arms and arguing.

Suddenly he darted across the street and left her alone again, and she went back slowly and resignedly to the doorway and at 2 a. m. was still there. Her boy!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Marjorie McBride

When the sweethearting boys and girls of today get to holding hands in the parks and gardens of this ancient town, the worst they can anticipate is a snicker from the people on the next bench. It wasn't like that in Colonial times.

Courting was a serious business then, according to the eminent Alice Morse Earle and other writers treating of the period. Officers of the night watch were empowered to take a hand. A girl wasn't supposed to "go out with the young man of her choice—without the consent of her parents. If he failed to get it, and still was caught philandering, MARJORIE McBR he could be stocked, ducked, whipped or fi Frequently he was.

Watchful fathers were strictly protected the Colonial judges and the police of the Not that all of them were so particular in t own lives. One English governor wanted wed a particular widow, but the ministers a civil authorities wouldn't oblige. He performed the marriage ceremony himself. Wh he was tried he appointed himself a judge try the case. The issue was never in doubt

A widower was expected to marry as soo as his wife was cold in the grave. Apparently he wasn't considered a good moral hazard. Folks in Boston who amounted to anything were all for widowers marrying widows.

Old Maids Failed; Called "Thornbacks"

Old maids were not considered desirable. The Colonials called them "thornbacks." A girl as young as 25 was considered "an ancient maid." Single women approaching 30 were supposed to be mending and darning for their brothers' children, cooking for church suppers, and getting ready to face their Maker.

Much of the sweethearting, permitted and otherwise, was done in the vicinity of the Common back in the early eighteenth century.

Races for Gentlemen Riders to Be Held

In another year, one learns, there'll be a turf track and regular steeple chasing at Suffolk Downs. Races exclusively for gentlemen riders will be held during the regular meet that opens in June.

Fashionables who are expected to enter jumpers this year include Sumner Pingree, Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., William Almy, John Macomber, Bruce Wetmore, Richard Ely and Christian A. Herter.

Belmont Park, on Long Island, long has had special races for the society set, specializing in steeple chasers.

When he's crossing a street, he waits for the lights, if there are lights. If there aren't, he just sails in and crosses, anyway. If trucks and taxis or pleasure cars bear down, he raises his hand in a lordly gesture, and traffic ceases until he is safe on the other shore.

In Cambridge, where he is well known and loved, that is no miracle. Even in New York, however, he can wave back the onrush of traffic as if he bore a magic wand.

Glove and purse combinations in suede are a novelty at Jordan Marsh store. They're the same color, fashioned to contrast with the ensemble.

AUSTEN LAKE

Drama in Beacon St.

Focal Point on

The Marathon Trail

AS THE TWO TURNED INTO Beacon Street and began the heartbreak stretch which is the horror of every Marathon, the Indian boy looked like Johnny Kelley's shadow, a lithe smudge at his shoulder. There was a sensation of hot rivets under Johnny's heart, blood boiled into his eyes and, he said afterwards, his skull sockets felt like glow-holes in a furnace.

Austen Lake

Johnny lifted his elbows a little higher to give his lungs more clearance and he sucked deeply of the cool, sweet air. An official handed him water in a paper cup and he showered his head with moisture that felt like steam on his overheated flesh. He knew, he said, that his internal chemistry was curdling and that the swift, shuddering waves of nausea meant approaching collapse.

He was conscious, he said, only of the chuff-chuff of his soles on the asphalt, the feel of loose bird-shot in his throat and people's faces swimming by like faces painted on eggs. And suddenly, on the downslope at Coolidge Corner, there was a dishpan banging in his ears and his inwards came floating up, so that, when he woke, he found himself walking, his body refusing to answer the signals of his brain.

He had lost all sense of time and space, he said, so that today, except for the ache in his ankles and adhesive strips on his heels, he might have dreamed the 26 miles and 235 yards between the hedges of Hopkinton and the brick canyons of Exeter street..

THE DRAMATIC MILE

THE INDIAN BOY, TARZAN BROWN, had labored on from this point, jerking his bullfrog thighs and narrowing bloodshot eyes down to slits in a copper mask. He made groping gestures toward a press car for lemon halves that did not exist, and stumbled on.

He said he had the feeling of fringe below his waist and an opaque shutter seemed to close on his vision, so that he hobbled to a walk near Audubon square and went reeling about the street in a sick stupor that nearly hung him on the fenders of attendant cars.

A man came over and splashed the contents of a water jar in his face shouting counsel in his ear. And he turned, wobbly and aged in the street to peer backward toward where, some of his middle, approached by inches as though rocked and.

Indiana motor escort stopped and the crowd gaped the boy's sufferings. Further down the street lanes , sensing tragedy, converged in a bottle neck and for he stood as the focal point in breathless vacuum.

PRICE OF IMPUDENCE

PRESENTLY THE MIST IN his brain cleared and he picked up the tempo to wade away at a leaden lope. And though he walked several times again, his dying energy carried him safely over the finish before he fell with glazed eyeballs, a feeling of fuzz in his throat and deaf to the clamor of his victory. So he said.

He had paid the price of his impudent pace and for making the procession a boresome procession until he reached Newton's Hills, when the rubber seemed slowly to leak through the pours of his mahogany hide. He had sifted briskly through the Marathon clowns, the bicycle kids and official tourists who cluttered the race before Ashland, and had bounced over the horizon before the rest of the pack had warmed above body heat.

Neither he nor his pursuing herd knew how far he was ahead. The rise of the slopes and the bends of the road hid his figure. And though he said his pre-race plan had been to set clock by Kelley's heels and join the circle of Johnny's disciples, he decided suddenly to blow his energies on a spendthrift burst

BEES Can Climb TO FIFTH

By Bill Grimes

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 21—On his way down from Franklin avenue subway station to Ebbetts Field yesterday noon, Manager Bill McKechnie out of a clear sky, announced "I'll sure shake up that batting order if we don't win today."

Apparently one of the swarm was eavesdropping for the Bees went out and scored seven runs during the first three innings and coasted home with their second victory of the season which shook them loose from last place.

Ray Benge has been credited with both of the Bees' wins. He relieved Ben Cantwell in the fifth end of the second game in Philadelphia with the Bees leading, 9 to 3, and the official scorer listed him as the winning pitcher.

After holding the Dodgers to eight hits and three runs, in seven and one-third innings yesterday, Benge tired and was replaced by Al Blanche, who is rapidly making a name for himself as a relief pitcher.

Starting with Gene Moore's home run drive over the right field score board, the veteran Earnshaw was given a terrific shellacking, the first four Bees hitting safely.

Then the McKechnie Clan took Jeffcoat over the jumps for six hits and four runs in the next two innings, but they were stopped abruptly by Max Butcher, who allowed only two hits and held them scoreless until he was relieved for Pinch Hitter Johnny Jordan in the eighth inning

Manager Bill McKechnie will start Wayne Osborne against the Driftless Boys of Casey Stengel this afternoon.

In the event that the Chicago Cubs and Cincinnati Reds lose today the Bees will move into a three cornered tie for fifth place if they take the second game with the Dodgers this afternoon and with such an incentive they will be in a belligerent mood when good old 'Beans' Reardon calls play ball at Ebbets Field.

GAME LITTLE JOHNNY KELLEY'S BID THAT FAILED

3

THE BID THAT FAILED. Johnny Kelley of Arlington caught up with Tarzan Brown, Unicorn Marathon winner, to take the lead for a short while on the Newton hills, but Tarzan was not to be denied and he quickly established himself as master of the grind as Kelley dropped back in that last "haunting mile" to finish fifth.

Race Reveals U. S. Olympic Hope Very Slim

OFFICIATING ON HIGH PLANE

By Will Connell

Most dramatic of all B. A. A. marathons, the 40th annual blister battle was being rehashed today.

The consensus is that the dizziest exhibition of all time made the race so colorful a spectacle.

For the Unicorn toddle of 26 miles, 385 yards was at once a perfectly run and a badly run race.

Dezzy Wadsworth, Tom Kanaly, George V. Brown, Sr., and their running mates of the B. A. A. might well have let the event slip into sports' memory hook, with the old clubhouse gone and race facilities missing.

Instead they dipped freely into the slender war chest which had been padded a trifle by last winter's indoor track games. They put more work than ever into staging the run and from start to finish the event was handled flawlessly. A bantzal, a couple of visas and a bow to the group

The bad running all came from the contestants, and took its toll in the final few miles, when the amazing spectacle of the first five men staggering along, rear collapse at the same time, awed the record crowd

Tarzan Brown was responsible, though there of course the Gannett Ghost didn't plan the agonizing windup.

FAST PACE

It was the blinding pace set by Brown that caused the slow finish, some three minutes slower than Les Pawson's course record

Spread over the course in even fashion, the same energy that Brown spent might have whirled him home in better than 2 hours, 30 minutes, well under the old record of 2:31 1-5. Tarzan had that much running in him.

Here is the story: Brown ran so fast that he piled up 1000 yards' advantage at Auburndale. The first ten were getting news of that, shouted to them in dribbles of information from the sidelines.

So that gradually the first flight became desperate, knowing that the great gap might prove impossible to close unless they started to spend their vanishing store of muscle-zip more freely Thus it was the entire group moved up on Brown as he faltered badly for the first time going up the long hill before the level stretch that leads on to Boston College

Up the last long hill mentioned it appeared from the press official cars that Kelley was planning to overtake the barely moving Brown.

Johnny denied this, late last night as he chatted about the race at his Arlington home.

At any rate, Johnny had been stepping on the gas for a couple of miles, reasoning correctly that he had to narrow the gap in case Brown was able to keep going And Johnny pulled the others with him in his fruitless chase

So that down the Beacon street graveyard of marathoners' hopes not one of the first five or six had anything left, and any rank outsider who had come up running steadily could have snatched the victory with ease It was a mere accident that no such runner appeared—accident and good fortune for the place winners.

The writer has never seen a runner as near collapse as Brown at Audubon Circle. Tarzan actually kept his feet while unconscious and in any sporting event where officials chase dangerously weakened men to the sidelines, he would have been excused from further duty then and there.

The point is this—that off the Boston Athletic Association race the United States has no reason for any confidence looking forward to the Olympics.

Our brave envoys to Berlin should be 1000 to 1 shots next Summer when the marathon call is issued.

The United States' marathon team selection plan is ridiculous. Even now, only Brown is qualified for the U. S. team, on the B. A. A. credit. Another man will be named the winner of the Washington Marathon at the end of May.

The Olympic Committee must then go into a huddle to try and find out who the third man should be. They might borrow Sidonia, the Sorceress's crystal ball and go into a trance to get the answer.

Johnny Kelley apparently was on the shelf this morning, for he would have to win or perhaps be a strong second in the Washington marathon, and he said today he does not intend to enter that race.

Both Ends

Many of the 36,000 baseball fans who saw the Red Sox lose to the Nats in the afternoon game, also saw both the winner and the tailender of the Marathon

Before they entered Fenway Park they caught a glimpse of Tarzan Brown loping on from Kenmore square to victory wearing No. 147. After the game the fans swarmed into Kenmore square again, about 5:30 p m., just in time to see Vincenzo Cappucio of East Boston, wearing No. 148, walking past that point in his Marathon journey.

Ouimet Captains Walker Team

American defense of the Walker Cup today was under the able direction of Francis Ouimet, Boston a Number One golf amateur

The squad includes George Dunlap, Jr., George Voigt, Scotty Campbell, Harry Givan, Reynolds Smith, Ed White, Johnny Goodman, Johnny Fischer, Walter Emery and Charlie Yates.

Crusaders Crush Brown by 4-2

Worcester, April 21—It wasn't a great day for all the Browns as the baseballers from Brown University could tell the world today.

While Tarzan Brown was winning the Marathon, the Bruno nine was tangling with Holy Cross. At the end of nine innings the score read 4 to 2 in favor of the Crusaders

Mr. Boston Danno Tours South

By Jack Conway

Speaking of news: Danno O'Mahony, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, has started a new tour of the South. The Irishman wrestled at Atlantic City last night. He will appear in Baltimore tonight then Richmond and later Atlanta.

Jack McGrath tells me O'Mahony is the best box office attraction in Atlanta since "Young" Stribling was boxing.

Following his tussle in Atlanta, the champion will move into the West for matches in Portland and Cleveland. He's also scheduled to defend his title in Toronto.

I thought O'Mahony looked better against Wynn at the Garden on last Friday night than he has for any of his American bouts. Despite the fact the Frenchman was the first wrestler to pin Danno's shoulders to the canvas for three seconds.

Mr. Boston

O'Mahony showed brilliant wrestling form in the early stages of the contest, and electrified the big crowd when he scored the first fall of the bout with his famous "Irish Whip." Danno took some severe punishment before Robert counted with his fall, but he came back and held the Frenchman on fairly even terms during the closing minutes of the bout. It was one of the fastest wrestling bouts ever held in this city.

WHITE HOPE

EDDIE MACK tells me he has a "white hope" by the name of Max Rousch. The latter is 13 years old, weighs 104 pounds and is six feet one inch tall. His home is in Houston, Texas, and he doesn't plan to turn professional for a couple of years.

* * *

Tarzan Brown! A good name for a Marathon runner or a fighter. The boy possesses plenty of heart and didn't will even when Johnny Kelley was thundering at his heels.

* * *

Tarzan is a Narragansett Indian. Which may enable Walter O'Hara to claim credit for his victory.

* * *

It would have been better showmanship if the Sox had saved the ninth inning finish of the morning game for the afternoon when Fenway Park was jammed to capacity.

* * *

Alex MacLean will [illegible] wrestling wars at the Arena tomorrow night when Nick Lutze will clash with George K.O. Koverly. Lutze was a heavyweight boxer before he went in for wrestling, and he insists he can outpunch the California caveman.

* * *

Believe it or not, as Bob Ripley would say, but "Bull" Martin was the greatest attraction to show at MacLean's shows. He dragged 140,000 customers into the Arena over a period of two years. Which was something about which to cheer.

* * *

TOM THORP will be tendered a dinner at Narragansett Park on April 30. Thorp, one of the finest racing officials in the country, will be presiding steward at the Pawtucket, R. I., racing strip. He will act in a similar capacity at Rockingham Park, while he will be general manager at Empire City.

* * *

Thorp has a reputation as an honest, fearless official. He has exceptional control over jockeys. The boys usually give their mounts a good ride when Thorp is presiding in the steward's stands.

I have accepted an invitation to give a talk on sports before the Town Criers of Rhode Island, a live wire advertising club in Providence, at the Biltmore Hotel, Providence next Monday noon.

"Our members are highly sports conscious, and this seems a propitious time to tell the sports story," writes Paul Oury, General Manager of WPRO Providence, "and I can think of no one more able along these lines than yourself."

Thanks, Paul.

Jane Sharp Stricken Ill

St. Louis, Apr. 21 (INS)—Jane Sharp, a member of Bill Tilden's professional tennis troupe, was under observation in a hospital here today.

Sissies?

If the Tech dinghy-men had any idea that they had the supremacy of the Charles River Basin neatly sewed up, they have another think coming to them.

For just as they were coming up the home stretch this morning at the M. I. T. boathouse, word was spread around that a challenge had just come from the Katherine Gibbs School for Girls across the river to face off with the engineer boatsmen in their own frostbite dinghies at any date which Technology may set.

EVEN THE MAGIC appearance of Wes Ferrell couldn't turn the tide in favor of the Red Sox in that second game with the Washington Senators yesterday afternoon. Here is Wes making a game bid to beat out his roller, while acting as a pinch hitter in the ninth, but young Buddy Lewis nipped him at first with a pretty toss to Kuhl, Washington first sacker.

CRONIN CALLS GROVE TO SILENCE SOLONS

Cashman Praises Rick Ferrell

By Joe Cashman

Those of our Red Sox who aren't hitting in top stride, and they number a few, might profit by taking a page from "Rick" Ferrell's book.

Little Richard, lightweight of the squad, has not only caught every inning of every game that has been played to date but as he goes out to catch Grove today he's also leading the team in batting with 13 safeties in 25 times at bat for a .[illegible] mark.

Despite his lack of size and the arduous task of [illegible] pitchers' classy mitt and mask artist has been a consistent .300 hitter ever since he broke into the majors seven years ago.

[illegible] was held over a [illegible] over at the Yankee Stadium. In other afternoon, which caused us to query him as to the most curved ball [illegible] ever had to face.

5 A YEAR

"Not more than five or six, if that many. I don't just recall," he replied.

"I rarely think of trying for a home run because I'm not that type of hitter. I'm sure I could connect for 15 or more every season, but if I did, I'd bat for only about .250. I'm not built to be a fence buster. Only when a round-tripper is needed badly and I get a ball that I think I can drive a long distance do I attempt to clear any barriers. I'd be a fool as a hitter were I to continually aim for the walls."

Although too many players fail to learn that lesson. They ruin themselves as good singles and doubles hitters trying to be home-run heroes.

The Foxxes, Gehrigs, Greenbergs, Medwicks, Berggrens and Otts are the exceptions, not the rule. When their style is copied, the majority of imitators are doomed to failure.

Dick [illegible] a great deal of [illegible] Yankee Stadium [illegible] Ferrell [illegible] Fenway [illegible] Providing "Lefty" is anything like he was in [illegible] Coming now as near the Yankees as New York fans will be wondering what made them ever think that their P. Frothingham Appleton pitched a great game of ball 24 hours previously.

And maybe little Rick Ferrell will come through with another home run. It was while catching Grove last week that he banged out the aforementioned round tripper.

On the holiday, Richard collected three blows in four trips in the [illegible] and helped himself to a single and a walk in four times up in the afternoon.

GROVE TODAY

It just happened that when the [illegible] wanted to please, they came up with a pair of costly errors which let Washington put over their [illegible] runs in the first frame. Then they were handcuffed the remainder of the tilt by Pete Appleton, who pitched one of his finest games since or before he changed his name from Jablonowsky.

Incidentally, the shoe is likely to be on the other foot this afternoon when the crowd won't be nearly as large but the outcome just as important.

Robert Moses Grove is to do the Fenway flinging. Providing "Lefty" is anything like he was in [illegible] Coming now as near the Yankees as New York fans will be wondering what made them ever think that their P. Frothingham Appleton pitched a great game of ball 24 hours previously.

Sox Stars In Hovey Movie

The most popular baseball picture ever filmed, "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," is now being shown in the hova department on the third floor at the C. F. Hovey Company.

The film was exhibited yesterday morning and again this morning at 10 o'clock. The fina, screening takes place tomorrow morning at the same time.

There are many Boston players in the picture. Wes Ferrell and Lefty Grove look during the [illegible] parade. Moody and Cronin [illegible] while Grove and Foxx [illegible] in sports. Arlett [illegible] cheers long, [illegible] Weiner displays the proper way to steal a base, and Jimmy Foxx shows how he clouts home runs.

After the stars illustrate their positions, a few shots showing how tough an umpire's life is, goes on the screen. Close plays are shown at first and the audience attempts to guess whether the runner is safe or out. The reel is then run again to slow motion and it is surprising the number of wrong guesses the fans make.

It's a great picture, well worth seeing.

FOXX WRITES

Watch Grove Work Today | Boston Fans Nation's Best

By JIMMY FOXX

I'm giving out hot tips today.

My best bet is to take a peek at Robert Moses Grove in his first home start of the season when we take on the Senators again this afternoon.

I know better than to [illegible] dict what will happen [illegible] game. But I feel safe in [illegible] other day like he had in [illegible] debut in New York. Just wait [illegible] will see the greatest [illegible]

They call me the [illegible] custom for both of us [illegible] clubs to make watches [illegible] before large crowds.

Well, we certainly live [illegible] that custom when, much to [illegible] gust and sorrow, we were [illegible] to come through with a [illegible] that wonderful gathering of [illegible] than 50,000 that turned out [illegible] holiday afternoon to pay [illegible] ute.

It was our first home debut and the first game we lost by [illegible] than one run.

We couldn't field at the start and we couldn't hit at any time.

We were having one of those "off" afternoons that happen to the best of clubs and it was our misfortune to have it before such a grand house.

How nice it would have been if we could have reversed games and put on our morning display in the afternoon.

That three-run rally my mates [illegible] stazed in the ninth to pull the morning decision out of the fire was something worth seeing.

GOOD CROWDS

A game is a game and a hit a hit no matter when you get 'em, but I'd have traded my morning homer and a few more to smash one over the wall for that banner afternoon crowd.

Incidentally, the morning crowd was also something to write home about. More than 8000 were interested enough in us to be out at the park at 10 a. m. to watch us perform.

That would be a large Sunday afternoon attendance at a doubleheader in several cities around the circuit.

Imagine drawing close to 45,000 paid customers to two single games on a purely local holida...

There's only one Boston [illegible] baseball town in the [illegible]

It certainly does [illegible] baseball has to offer and [illegible] bet that each and every one of the Sox will work his head off to produce that best, a pennant.

If you're interested, I'm not one of Ed Linke's curves for my second home run of the year in the morning game.

I was far more interested in what some of my mates did.

I got a great kick out of seeing "Heinie" Manush, playing his first game against his old Washington club that let him out.

"Rube" Walberg, making his initial start of the year, hurled fine ball for us in that morning tilt until he tired in the eighth. He hadn't been on the mound in two weeks. It was natural that he weakened.

Johnny Welch was [illegible] of a lot of hard luck in the [illegible] Before the game was two minutes old, two errors had handed the Senators three unearned runs, which was all they need [illegible] back of Pete Appleton [illegible] pitching.

GOT BREAKS

But we had no cause to moan about the breaks. It was a pair of errors by the visitors that enabled us to walk off with the morning game.

I could provide it, but the afternoon crowd did see a home run. Jonathan Stone, Senator outfielder, hit a ball into the centerfield stands near the flagpole. I'm told it was the first ball ever [illegible] [illegible] park.

The [illegible] for the [illegible] attacked us out of the first part of the [illegible] we had been enjoying [illegible] Chicago White Sox, off to a [illegible] start again, now occupy the [illegible] cellar.

We never think of first place or any other spot when we are [illegible] their playing. All that matters is winning the game at hand. If we do that often enough, we'll never need to worry about places.

But the fans are always thinking in terms of the top. That's why I mention this angle.

Like all ball players however, we pay some notice to the [illegible] when we're reading the sports pages. And when we note that we haven't suffered any more defeats than Cleveland and fewer than Detroit and New York, we're satisfied that we're progressing favorably.

Art Sykes Draws 1 Year Suspension

Chicago, April 21 (INS)—Art Sykes, Elmira, N. Y. heavyweight [illegible] drew a year's suspension [illegible] today for his part in the [illegible] fault of his voluntary inactivity here last Wednesday night.

The Illinois Athletic Commission at a hearing yesterday ordered Sykes banned for a year, a suspension also effective in the states of California, Missouri and New York, with which the Illinois commission has working agreements.

ANN'S RACE PICKS FOR TODAY

ANN MARSTERS' BEST BETS FOR TODAY

Just think! PEACE RIVER, a first time starter in the first at Havre De Grace, had to run second yesterday to mar a winning day. PEACE RIVER paid $6.30 to place.

HIGH HASTE at Jamaica was scratched. LOVELY GIRL won and paid $7.20 at Havre. BETH BON and RED BADGE ran out. Day's play totaled $8 with the result my bankroll is now $528.40.

At Jamaica it's $2 to win on both MICROPHONE in the second and GRANVILLE in the fourth.

ANN MARSTERS' BETS
$2 Win Granville, Jamaica 4th.
$2 Win Making Time, Havre 1st.

Late Specials
$2 Win Star Porter, Havre 4th.
$2 Win Shepherd Boy, Havre 7th.

BANKROLL IS NOW $528.40. DAY'S PLAY, $10.

I'm betting MAKING TIME in first at Havre De Grace also.

My late specials for this afternoon are STAR PORTER in the fourth and SHEPHERD BOY in the seventh. Both are at Havre De Grace.

(At the suggestion of Walter O'Hare, Miss Marsters has set out to determine that conservative bets can result in satisfactory profits, or at worst small losses. Walter O'Hare, Narragansett Park owner, provided the capital with a $1000 gift. Half was turned over to the Boston Evening American Christmas Fund immediately. The remainder will be similarly handled at the end of the experiment. This is the seventeenth day.)

Jean Dupuy In Motorboat Race Classic

By Douglas Whitney

New York, April 21 (US)—The Atlantic to New York motor classic scheduled to be run down the Hudson river on May 10 with the William Randolph Hearst perpetual gold cup trophy as the top prize, has assumed international importance with the announcement that Jean Dupuy, captain of the French outboard team, has cabled his entry.

Dupuy, general manager of the city of Paris, is the publisher of La Petit Parisien, the largest newspaper in France. A fan of L'Excelsior, another important paper, was on hand to discuss pressing business affairs.

But from the contents of his cable he intimated that his business could be attended to from France in order to participate in the world's leading motor boat classic.

In addition to bringing his own outboard craft to this country, Dupuy will cross the Atlantic on the Normandie. He informed the entrance fee of one of the fastest that he has already deposited in Miami for the purpose of the famous harbor to harbor race. The second fastest craft is to be driven by Marcel Leclerc, champion of France's team for the Harmsworth trophy contest.

With Dupuy and Rothe as pointing boats in the International Stripp, Hardy and Capt. American entrants as E. H. Pat Jr., Jack Plunkett, Fred Jacoby, Jr., and possibly three or four others who possess outboards that qualify for the specialty event will be hard pressed to retain the honors on this side of the Atlantic ocean.

To race for the magnificent William Randolph Hearst gold cup will be under the auspices of the Miami Outboard Association and will be governed by the American Power Boat Association. The Miami Yacht Club, the Poughkeepsie Y. C. the Rondout Y. C., Newburgh Y. C. Regatta Circuit Riders Club, the First Battalion Naval Militia Reserve Ship, Illinois and several other clubs and civic bodies.

What the Stars Did

By Associated Press

WALLY BERGER, Bees—Found Brooklyn pitchers for three hits, one a double, and drove in two runs.

JOE BOWMAN, Phillies—Checked Giants with 10 hits and cracked out three singles.

GEORGE PUCCINELLI and FRANK HIGGINS, Athletics—Former hit home run with two on, latter got four hits and as many runs as A.'s defeated Yanks.

JIMMY FOXX, Red Sox and PETE APPLETON, Senators—Foxx hit home run and double in first game and Appleton pitched five-hit ball in second.

LYN LARY and TOM CAREY, Browns—Led attack on Tigers' pitchers with three hits.

Assured Warm Welcome at Derby

Louisville, Ky., April 21 (AP)—The pickpockets needn't fear the annual [illegible] shortage in Louisville. Detective Chief Edward McElliott said today they'll be met at the train, probably by friends from home, and assigned to nice, clean quarters now being dolled up by Taller Marts' Conmen.

The Louisville police, as usual, are borrowing 50 or 60 men celebrated for their wide acquaintance among the dips to help do the Derby day honors.

Beside that, Major McElliott said, the three score sleuths assigned to the work are studying up on the pictures and descriptions, just in case the borrowed squad misses somebody.

Sport Aces Ride In New Buick

A Special Series Buick sedan [illegible] the courtesy of the [illegible] Co., carried the Boston Evening American batsmen to victory in the sports marathon [illegible] Avalon Lake, Will Connell and Walter Kelley.

Gus Williams, veteran pilot [illegible] driver, also rode in the car which was driven by Charles Hansen of the Noyes-Buick Co.

B. U. Shifts

Boston University gridders started their final two weeks of spring practice today by moving from the Braves Field football field where they have been having their workouts to Nickerson field, Riverside.

DERBY HORSES MUST BEAT BREVITY

CONSISTENCY MARKS COLT

New York, April 21 (US)—It will take a truly great horse to beat Joseph E. Widener's Brevity in the 62nd running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs, May 2.

Despite a leap-year warning from a hitherto totally disregarded filly, and despite a horde of contradictory performances and workouts that cast a blanket of doubt over the Derby setup this weekend, the bay son of Sickle today appears stronger than ever for the mile and a quarter classic of the Blue Grass—if, of course, nothing happens to him between now and the afternoon of May 2.

The answer to that is consistency.

While the other highly regarded candidates have been performing in in-and-out fashion, Brevity has definitely established his ability to run a good race at any given time. He has won four of his five starts, two of them this year, and his last effort was the world's record, 1:48 1-5, in the mile and an eighth Florida Derby.

That record was recently shattered by Indian Broom, but here the three-fifths of a second difference in their times may be discounted by the weight factor.

Indian Broom carried 94 pounds in the Matthew Winn handicap at Tanforan when he set the mark of 1:47 3-5 for nine furlongs. Brevity toted 120 in the Florida Derby.

FILLY FACTOR

Gold Seeker, the brown daughter of Messenger, that won the 17th renewal of the mile and a sixteenth Chesapeake Stakes at Havre de Grace on Saturday, leaving such highly regarded Derby candidates as Grand Slam, Bright Plumage and Teufel in her wake, has been slashed to 30 to 1 from 200 to 1 in the Derby future books.

The victory, however, although well-earned, was none too impressive.

Gold Seeker's time of 1:48 1-5 over a fast track was far off the track record of 1:42 3-5 which Cavalcade set in capturing the Chesapeake in 1934.

All of Derby candidates which have already shown in competition this year, only three—Time Right, Bold Venture and Indian Broom—should be rated as worthy Derby contenders.

A half-dozen others—Bright Plumage, Hollycrost, Tintagel, He Did, Grand Slam and Delphinium—deserve at least one more chance to display the class which they have shown on occasion, but not consistently enough to merit outright contendership honors.

SLOW TIME

The Fighter's victory in the Texas Derby on Saturday was not as impressive as Roman Soldier's triumph in the same event last year. The track record for a mile and an eighth at Arlington Downs is 1:49 flat. The Fighter covered the nine furlongs in 1:51 4-5.

Furthermore, the bay son of Bull Dog had little to beat and that, probably, explains the slowness in time. The Fighter set a track record of 1:42 flat for a mile and 70 yards in a preceding performance.

Bold Venture, Morton L. Schwartz's Derby candidate, turned in a splendid effort for a 1936 debut in winning an allowance affair at Jamaica at a mile and 70 yards. He covered the distance over a good track in 1:41 4-5 and won plenty in spare. The son of Sir Gallahad showed tremendous route-running possibilities as a two-year-old and has filled out considerably since then.

There is great possibility, of course, that the winner of the 1936 Kentucky Derby has not yet performed this year. There are many high-class colts among the candidates yet to make their seasonal inaugurals.

These include Relair stable Granville, Glenteree Stable Memory Book, Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Ned Reigh, Coldstream stable Coldstream, and last, but far from least, despite their past records the Bradley candidates Rein Jo, Stanlee and Bow to Me.

Calls Him Best Bet Of Day

By Dave Wilson

(Selections made for fast track)

BEST BET—STAR PORTER, FOURTH RACE

Havre De Grace, Md., April 21—Star Porter shapes up not only as the probable winner of the featured fourth number, but as the outstanding betting proposition on a difficult card of seven races here today.

FIRST RACE

Making Time, Slump, Jeanne Fetzko

MAKING TIME, on general Florida form, shapes up vastly superior. A breezing four furlongs in :49 the first three panels in :48 SLUMP, third to Gold Bond only a few days back, should offer the contention. JEANNE FETZKO figures next best on basis of a recent third to Mistapina.

SECOND RACE

Miss Twinkle, Argoan, Sylvia G

This is the most wide open affair on the card. The winner may turn up in MISS TWINKLE. ARGOAN'S last and only start in this sector was much too poor to be true. A previous good Bowie endeavor shows this one a much more capable sort. SYLVIA G. fast and [illegible]hearted handy long enough to save the minor award.

THIRD RACE

Bubbling Spring, Singing Heart, Fake

String along with BUBBLING SPRING in this affair. That last and only start was in the nature of a conditioner. SINGING HEART was barely nosed out by Epitaph last trip and picks up five additional pounds, but looms all over the one to fear. FAKE is a last possibility on good Florida form.

FOURTH RACE

Star Porter, Vanderbilt Entry, Zax

STAR PORTER, making a season's debut on Saturday, just missed drubbing Night Sprite in 1:12 2-5. BACHELOR DINNER and DREES, which ran out coupled as the Vanderbilt entry, are strictly the dangers. ZAT is a possibility.

FIFTH RACE

Kearsarge, Forest Play, Seven Star

Going to give KEARSARGE one more chance. That last and only effort in this section was too poor to be true. FOREST PLAY, third to Bob's Boys, ran a winning race in that most recent endeavor after being all but left with the break. SEVEN STAR closed a world of ground to finish third to Ampersand in a swiftly-run dash last time.

SIXTH RACE

Manager Bill, Wandrel, Canimar

MANAGER BILL ducked today's card to await this much easier spot. WANDREL, performed for the well-known [illegible] last time. Previous good races entitle third hard-knocking mare to the next best figure. CANIMAR should be along in time to save the minor award.

SEVENTH RACE

Shepherd Boy, Sunned, Light Brook

SHEPHERD BOY, third to Helen Bab and Boocard in a swiftly run six furlongs, performed like a little shy on racing condition. SUNNED, a fast and faint-hearted trick, is endowed with a world of early foot. He should hang on long enough to save the place from LIGHT BROOK.

McCrehan Plans B. C. Shakeup

Coach Frank McCrehan plans a complete shakeup in his Boston College baseball team which climaxed a successful southern trip with a disastrous 14 to 3 loss to Fordham yesterday.

The Eagles' next opponent will be Springfield College whose nine invades Alumni Field for the second home game next Saturday.

About ten players, who were dropped from the Heights squad before the trip, will be left for the south, will be recalled to diamond practice today as the Eagle mentor makes a desperate last ditch effort to find a winning ward.

Some of the players who will again become candidates for the field and Maroon nine this afternoon include Ollie La Ronde, Frank Good, John Sweeney and Pat Avery, outfielders; Joe Horne, Tom McFadden and Jim Jobin, infielders; Bud Davis, Fred Bonito and Walter LePeisha, pitchers; John Forristal, Hugo Blandori and Frank Ryan, catchers.

Sports Mirror

FIVE YEARS AGO—Jonathan Stone of Detroit led American League home-run hitters with four.

B. C. Frosh Open

Indian Broom Off For Derby

San Bruno, Cal., April 21—Indian Broom, California derby hope was speeding toward Churchill Downs today while his backers held high hopes that he would return home as the Kentucky Derby victor.

As the pride of the West Coast and holder of the world record for a mile and a furlong stepped into his private railroad car, Trainer Merrill Cannon stated:

Arthur Wood Winner of Baseball Guessing Game

POOLE 2ND BEST

By Walter Kiley

Arthur Wood, 413 Essex street, Lynn, wins the distinction of making the best showing of more than 25,000 fans who competed in the Boston Evening American-Red Sox guessing contest.

Red Sox	9	13—1
Athletics	4	10—1

Red Sox	9	13—3
Athletics	3	8—2

POOLE SECOND

Charlie Poole, 10 Grove street, Belmont, was next best. His lineup didn't compare with that of Wood. He had Cooke in there instead of Melillo and several players in the wrong batting order.

Red Sox	8	13—2
Athletics	1	8—3

A total of 500 pairs of Red Sox tickets, good for any game except those on Sundays and holidays will be awarded the winners within a few days.

All 500 of the fortunate made surprisingly fine showings, considering the many changes of the Sox lineup during the closing spring training sessions.

Girl Adventurer Tells of Fall From Third Story

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

They say "luck favors fools and children." That may not be true about fools when it comes to driving automobiles but, it is often true of children.

FLOYD GIBBONS

We have had stories in this thrill corner of ours about escapes of children that are little short of miraculous. I guess all of us can remember some time or other in our childhood when the Grim Reaper just missed us with that long, sharp scythe of his.

I'll never forget how close the Old Man came to a boyhood chum of mine. We were playing "catch" with a baseball on the roof of a three-story apartment building. I threw him a high one and as he backed up with his eye on the ball, he backed right off the roof!

I was just a kid and the tragic accident frightened me so that I was afraid to look down to the back yard below. Three stories is pretty high to fall, and I was sure he had been killed.

My conscience bothered me, too. I had thrown the ball that had lured him to his death, and, childlike, I decided that I was guilty of murder, and then and there decided to say nothing about it.

So I sneaked down off the roof and went out the front without seeing anybody. When I got home I didn't say a word. I was all prepared, though, with an alibi if my folks spoke of the death of my chum to me. But at dinner that night the subject never came up. I was surprised. My chum's folks and mine knew each other and I wondered why they hadn't been notified.

Perhaps the body hadn't been found yet. Or perhaps they were waiting for me to speak.

I fooled them. I never said a word. I couldn't eat a thing and my dad knew something was wrong, but he wasn't going to hear it from me.

No, sir-ree. I was only eight years old, and it was my first murder, but I kept mum just like the "bad men" did in the dime novels I used to read.

There was no sleep for me that night. I was "breaking." And in the morning I decided to make a clean breast of the crime and take my medicine in jail or be hanged, as the case might be.

I was just going to open up with my confession when my mother sent me for the breakfast rolls, so I put it off until my return and started for the store.

Coming out of the store I dropped my bag of buns and nearly dropped dead!

The corpse of the chum I had "killed" stood on the sidewalk grinning from ear to ear!

There wasn't a drop of blood showing and there wasn't a mark on him except the remains of that black eye I had given him a week before. He was alive, all right, and as we munched a sugar bun apiece he told me the story.

When he felt himself sailing through the air, he said, he thought it was the end. But just as he expected the crash of death he landed as gently as an acrobat in a net. A cloud of dust arose. He looked around. Somebody had been cleaning carpets in the back yard. They had placed a large carpet over two clothes lines. This made a perfect net and my murder victim had landed, safely, right in the center.

I ask you, is that luck, or is it luck?

JACQUELINE KASHINS, of BROOKLYN, N. Y., our featured adventurer today, had a break of luck herself. She is a big girl now, but she was only eight, back in 1920, when Lady Luck saved her for the Adventurers' Club.

Jacqueline and her folks lived at that time in a third-floor apartment that had clothes lines strung on pulleys from each floor. You've seen them. They generally run from a window to a neighboring building or pole. The clothes are pulled out and back as needed.

Well, sir, little Jacqueline wasn't very strong and her mother never let her help with the housework, but one day when mother was out Jacqueline played she was washing her doll's clothes.

She had seen her mother hang out the clothes, so she climbed on the window sill and hung out her "wash." The doll clothes wouldn't move the way they did for her mother, so she tried to push them out as far as she could.

And, as she did, Jacqueline lost her balance and fell.

But Lady Luck was on the job. She whispered to Jacqueline to hold on to the clothes line. And Jacqueline did.

The weight of her little body made the line sag and the pulleys [illegible] squeak, [illegible] and sent her up a little [illegible]

And [illegible] saw a dress hanging to [illegible] The rope were just [illegible] [illegible]

Mother saw the animated clothes line and screamed to her [illegible] Jacqueline did [illegible] the rope was beginning to [illegible] and she didn't know how long she could keep her [illegible]

[illegible] appeared at the window she had just left. Jacqueline [illegible] but she couldn't do a thing for herself but hold on. She [illegible] down once at the cement court below and nearly [illegible]

[illegible] told not to look down. So she just closed her eyes [illegible] her little teeth and held on.

The rope started to move slowly.

Jacqueline opened her startled eyes and glanced back fearfully [illegible] window. A man was smiling at her and slowly pulling the [illegible] the way her mother did with the clothes.

Slowly, but surely, the post that held the line at the other end [illegible] nearer. The man knew her grip must be getting weaker [illegible] he didn't want to shake her hands loose.

After an agony of suspense Jacqueline felt the post touch her [illegible] And, by golly, those little legs of hers wrapped around that post like a monkey's and she shinned down it like a tomboy.

AND LUCK HAD ONCE MORE WON.

Jacqueline is getting into her twenties now and she's had a lot of thrilling rides in amusement parks, but, she says, she's never had a ride thrill her as much as that clothes-line coaster did—RIGHT IN HER OWN BACK YARD.

And, I repeat, boys and girls, you don't have to go all over the world for thrills. Most of the time you can find them—like the bluebird—right in your own back yard. Send me in the biggest thrill in YOUR life and read the thrilling yarn I'll tell you tomorrow.

Floyd Gibbons will pay good money for good TRUE adventure stories. Hundreds of people in Boston and nearby towns have received ten-dollar and hundred-dollar bills for their yarns, and there's no reason why you can't do the same, for, as Floyd says, everybody has had at least one adventure. Archie Levesque of 9 Blackwell street, Montpelier, Vt., won a hundred and ten dollars for the story of his life's biggest moment, and you can do the same. For further details, see the box at the right side of this page.

O'HARAS Are Veterans of "Tobacco Road"

By GEORGE HOLLAND

"Tobacco Road," has been a long, long trail a-winding for the Fiske O'Haras, husband and wife. Together, they have enjoyed or endured only eighty-six weeks' employment in the course of 9 years by Jack Kirkland.

Mrs. O'Hara (Minnie Dupree) has played Grandma Lester in the New York company [illegible] Paul[illegible] performance [illegible] and a brief stand with Mr. O'Hara directing the theatrical pieces [illegible] Both semi-[illegible] the [illegible] hanger of the [illegible] for the [illegible] time in March 1935.

John Litel, the young actor who stepped into the [illegible] of district attorney in "Night of January 16" when Edmund Pierce died, won his [illegible] part in a play consisting of seven men and three women. Two evenings have been needed for "Night of January 16." Ten women were [illegible] to act on the Shubert Theatre pair. Mr. Litel had come off second best in Paul Muni's defeat as attorney.

Mr. Litel does not feel that masculine appeal is [illegible] that women are [illegible] [illegible] less leniency with men of their own sex than are men. And the defendant in "Night of January 16" is a very beautiful young woman, played by Ilona Massey.

In New York, women [illegible] the make-believe jurors from the very opening of the show. Los Angeles, April 21—Try and find original titles for movies. It's next to impossible—everything's been said before. That's why Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is so pleased over "The Devil Was a Sissy," an original yarn by Roland Brown and Frank Fenton.

It's a good title because it has that [illegible] in the theater [illegible] especially when you consider that [illegible] Freddie Bartholomew [illegible] Mickey Rooney are the [illegible] juvenile [illegible] Freddie [illegible] Kitty [illegible] comes to the [illegible] and [illegible] Mickey [illegible] the son of an Irish [illegible] and Jackie [illegible] father is a criminal. Ball Stars On Screen

Baseball grasps the nation's spotlight as more than 200,000 rabid fans witness the opening games of the major leagues, and Hearst Metrotone cameramen record the inaugurals. In Washington, President Roosevelt throws out the first ball and, as is usual when the Chief Executive is on hand, the Senators win a ball game, this time from the New York Yankees.

Boston's rejuvenated Red Sox provide a good indication of their new-found prowess by overwhelming Connie Mack's young athletes from Philadelphia. Which brought about the paradox of most of Connie's former stars playing against his team this being due to trades of last year and the year before.

Italy presents the astounding sight of more than 100,000 children from the ages of eight to 11, marching in full military array to hear Mussolini announce further triumphs in Ethiopia. And they display all the war spirit of their elders, even sending up a mighty chorus of the national anthem. And in another section King Victor Emmanuel and Marshal di Bono, of Ethiopian fame, look on as Italian cavalry and tanks provide a spectacular show.

The history of the League is the history of the hobo hotels on the Bowery. Just one flop after another.

Somebody wants to start a League of Nations on this side of the ocean. It's a dumb idea by a smart guy who knows that the time to dig for clams is at low tide.

In our weakened condition we went for the NRA and other alphabetical consensuses. We might go for the League if it was floated as a bond issue.

LEWIS HANEY ON TREND

U. S. Stage Set FOR EFFECTIVE CREDIT Inflation Boom

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, April 21—Latest available figures show that the leading weekly indices of industrial activity have reached a new high since 1930. All the main standard items point upward.

It seems fairly clear that we await only (1) the coming of seasonably warm weather and (2) the stepping up of the Roosevelt administration's pre-election spending program, before seeing another New Deal boomlet.

This one starts from a higher level than its predecessors in 1933 and 1934. Furthermore, it has the advantage of being fairly free of fear concerning monetary inflation ("greenbacks"), and fear that the Constitution and the Supreme Court will be destroyed as effective parts of our Republican form of government.

Then, too, it has the background of a depreciation of capital equipment which necessarily increases with the years.

Unless the New Dealers lose all political sense and run riot with their collectivist schemes, or unless a general European war conflagration breaks out, the stage is set for a more effective credit-inflation boom than any yet seen. Since neither of these contingencies seem at all likely, a buoyant state of business is probable this spring, and a less than seasonal let-down in the early summer.

* * *

Weather conditions may prove to be a handicap. Thus in parts of the west and southwest there is serious drought. Since last October, precipitation has been less than 75 per cent of normal. Furthermore, cold and wet weather in some other sections has delayed planting and the crops are two or three weeks late. But in the east, northwest and Pacific Coast sections precipitation has been heavy.

Last week steel production was stepped up to around 70 per cent of capacity. The demand from motor producers, railways, and construction operations has grown, and the replacement of flood and tornado damage is a factor. Blast furnaces continue to be blown in, indicating anticipations of farther strong demand.

New car sales are heavy in most sections and indicate a high level of production for the next two or three weeks.

By that time, the spurt in building and construction is likely to be in full blast. (Incidentally, I note that March figures just received show a very sharp rise in cement shipments, and a wholesale reduction in stock. Railway shipments of forest products—largely lumber—are up and 18 per cent above 1935 or 1934.)

* * *

In fact, railway carloadings have gained more than seasonally, and, while this is partly due to the coal movement caused by cold weather, it seems clear that delayed movements of other things will make up for the subsequent decline in fuel shipments.

I would class retail trade in general as fairly good, with prospects excellent.

Wholesale prices, though still irregular, stiffened a little last week. Wheat, corn, and flour ran up on drought developments, but advances also occurred in cotton, copper, silver, rubber, hides, lumber, and brick. The most significant declines were in cotton cloth, wool, and silk.

Sentiment during the week was clouded by fears concerning foreign developments. It became generally realized that the League of Nations has virtually broken down. The approach of the French elections brings near the franc devaluation issue.

But the League debacle makes it less likely that there will be any general European war in the near future. As to the French franc, the disturbed and unstable conditions abroad make any large outflow of funds from this country very unlikely.

Since Mr. Roosevelt's tax proposals, including a tax on foreign stockholders, the inflow of funds for investment has been checked. His Socialistic Baltimore speech had a similar effect. But that is about all. The French are having their own troubles with taxes and Socialist schemes at home.

ANNUAL MEETING Graham-Paige

NEW STOCK TO BE OFFERED

At the annual meeting of the Graham-Paige Motors Corporation yesterday, stockholders ratified the proposed increase in the authorized common capital stock from 2,500,000 to 3,500,000 shares and the offering to stockholders of 600,000 shares of the additional stock.

Four hundred thousand of these 600,000 shares will be underwritten by the Grahams and their associates if not auscribed by the stockholders.

Stockholders also voted to eliminate the present authorized 7 per cent cumulative convertible 2nd preferred stock all of which has been duly retired. The new stock will be offered to stockholders of record April 10, 1936, on the basis of one new share for each four shares held as of that date at $3 per share.

* * *

Joseph B. Graham, president, told stockholders that orders received in the first half of April exceeded the entire month of April, 1935, and that orders for the company's new "Supercharger" models were 18 per cent greater than in March, 1936.

"Contacts with the dealer organization in all parts of the country indicate that the last half of April will be 50 per cent better than in the first half of the month," he said.

The company is launching a special sales and advertising campaign on April 27, to continue through May 2, in which it is planned to demonstrate the new Graham cars to 150,000 prospects.

Cash and dealer prizes will be awarded to dealers who make good their demonstration quotas.

MACHINE Tool Sales IMPROVE

DISTRIBUTORS IN N. E. HOPEFUL

New York, April 21—Stimulated by a few flood replacements, a certain amount of automobile business and one price increase, machine tool sales were better in April, says American Machinist.

Machinery distributors have adopted the wise policy of booking every order possible while business is on the upgrade, and despite the political threats to business inherent in the President's tax program and forecast in his Baltimore speech.

In the New England territory orders and inquiries continue to come in in satisfactory volume and distributors are optimistic for continued good business for several months.

The Metropolitan district, according to New York distributors, has experienced an improvement in actual orders that may bring the month of April almost into the 1929 class.

Considerable business in this territory was stimulated by the increase in price of radial drills. In Philadelphia there has been a slight recession partly because deliveries are more difficult to get, but the under-current of sentiment is felt to be decidedly hopeful.

Pittsburgh reports that flood damage to industrial equipment was apparently much more serious than had been thought at first.

* * *

Both machine tool and small tool business in this territory is working toward higher levels. No immediate threat of labor trouble exists anywhere in the Eastern territory.

* * *

In Cleveland wage rates are tending upward but the pressure of the skilled labor shortage is easing as a result of the many training programs that have now been operating for some months.

A slackening of domestic business for machine tools and small tools is being offset by foreign orders. Detroit automobile manufacturers are beginning to think about machine tool purchases, having gone so far as to mention a "program."

Orders and inquiries for machine tools are indicative of an improvement in business and a considerable increase in small tool orders is imminent.

In Cincinnati improvement in the machine tool industry is reported by most observers, although there are instances of slight recession in April. Some unrest in labor circles is expected because of the high level of activity in most of the plants, but no immediate difficulty is anticipated.

Things are moving along on a fair level in Indiana, with inquiries and orders from diversified lines at a level which could fairly be considered normal.

There is apparently very little labor unrest. In and around St. Louis machinery orders are rather quiet, but inquiry is active and supply sales are in excellent volume.

Bond Prices Move Irregularly Higher

New York, April 21 (INS)—Shaking off the depressing influence of yesterday's late selling, the bond market moved irregularly higher today. Trading was also spurred by strength in second-grade rails and several pivotal industrials.

Canadian Pacific 5s led the way in the carrier section with an overnight advance of more than a point. Large fractional gains were chalked up by N. Y. Central 6s, Nickel Plate 4½s, Northern Pacific 6s, and Missouri Pacific 4s.

Bon Ami, several issues slipped under their previous closings, including Southern Pacific 4½s of 1968, Erie General 4s, Lehigh Valley 4½s and New Haven 6s.

In the domestic industrial list Studebaker 6s jumped 2½ points while International Cement 5s and Allis Chalmers 5s did about as well.

Servel Inc

Servel Inc. declared a quarterly dividend of 15 cents on the common, payable June 1 to stock of record May 20. Previously the quarterly dividend was 12½ cents.

Farm Electrification

PERCENTAGE OF FARMS ELECTRIFIED

In the thickly settled North Atlantic States and the Far West where electricity is used for irrigation one farm in three has electric service. Rural electrification in the South and Middle Western areas is rare and, in some States, practically non-existent. The Rural Electrification Administration, with a fund of $100,000,000, is attempting to remedy this condition. The Electric Home and Farm Authority is helping to finance the purchase of electric appliances and equipment to consume power. A substantial increase in rural electrification will materially benefit appliance and other electrical equipment sales.

Government statistics reveal that 65 per cent of our farms have automobiles; 40 per cent have telephones; 23 per cent have radios; but only 10 per cent have electricity.

FROZEN ASSETS

CLOSED BANKS Will BeSold On Auction Block

By Cecil B. Dickson
Universal Service

Washington, April 21—Half a billion dollars of frozen assets in 1305 closed National banks will be sold on the auction block in a series of public sales approved today by comptroller of the currency, J. F. T. O'Connor.

Adopted on a nation-wide scale to get funds to pay off depositors in the defunct institutions, the sales series will be drummed up by sound-truck, radio and newspaper advertising in the communities where the auctions will take place.

William Prentiss, first deputy comptroller and former California real estate promoter, instituted the plan in defense of the "frozen assets" after every other attempt made to sell the properties, largely real estate, had failed.

Experimental sales, in several small and large Southern cities, amounting to more than $1,000,000, proved so successful that Comptroller O'Connor gave orders they be carried on until all of the properties were sold.

A survey of all the property tied up in the closed national banks has been about completed for the sales, which will be conducted in the old-fashioned way with the addition of modern appliances.

Besides listing all the properties of a certain defunct bank for sale in newspapers, a sound truck that plays music as it carries records announcing the property to be sold will be sent throughout the cities and nearby countryside. Circulars also are distributed.

Regular old "auction criers" will handle the sales, which require a one-third cash deposit on real estate and full cash on personal property. Terms are allowed subject to the approval of the comptroller general.

Brill Corp.

The Brill Corp., controlled by American Car & Foundry Company, report for 1935 showed net income of $2017, equal to five cents a share on the 7 per cent preferred, against $9005 or 24 cents a share on the preferred, in 1934.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, April 21—One of the largest interest in the tire industry yesterday blamed the acute labor situation in Akron for delaying a price increase.

The fear was expressed that such a move at this time might lead to demands from workers for a share in the price boost and thus could create an even more disturbing crisis in the industry.

Reports that the upward revision was being held in abeyance because a big western distributor was offering a larger trade-in allowance on tires were emphatically denied. This situation, it was said, has been satisfactorily adjusted. One source reiterated its belief that the industry needed higher prices due to the rising cost of raw rubber and other expenses.

Power Survey Shows Patchwork Regulation

A survey of the jurisdiction and regulation of electric rates and service by state commissions, made by the Federal Power Commission, is notable for the great diversification of such authority conferred on the state commissions. The survey shows that all of the states, except Delaware, and the District of Columbia, have regulatory bodies with jurisdiction over some class of utilities. Florida, Minnesota, Mississippi, South Dakota and Texas commissions have no jurisdiction over electric utilities, although the Minnesota body does have the power to regulate construction of electric lines which may interfere with lines of communication. Iowa has jurisdiction over transmission lines outside of municipalities but no authority to regulate rates. Thirty-eight state bodies report that they have the authority to regulate rates charged by privately-owned utilities, but some of them are limited to regulation of maximum rates while others rates outside of "home rule" cities. The survey reflects conditions in October last year.

Texas & Pacific Earnings Higher

Texas & Pacific Railroad's earnings in March rose sharply, stimulated by freight loadings which were nearly 10 per cent above a year ago for the month. The road's March net income was $156,735 after fixed charges, against $12,967 in the like 1935 month, and for the first three 1936 months the road showed earnings of $1 on the 5 per cent non-cumulative preferred stock, against net loss of $146,521 in the 1935 quarter. While the road has declared no dividends on preferred stock since 1932, and made no payments on account since 1931 resumption of payments would directly benefit Missouri Pacific Railroad, now being reorganized under the bankruptcy law. Missouri Pacific owns all of the 237,700 shares of Texas & Pacific A per cent preferred, and 229,463 shares of the 387,550 common outstanding. Texas & Pacific last year earned $5.83 on preferred, and after preferred requirements, 51 cents on the common. In 1934 it earned $4.35 on preferred, and after preferred requirements had a deficit of 40 cents a share on common.

Exports, Imports Volume Higher

The Commerce Department reported today exports from the United States amounted to $195,836,000, or 7 per cent higher than the export volume of $181,858,000 in February.

Imports, totaling $200,295,000, were 9 per cent larger than the $192,776,000 of imports in February.

Bar Gold

London, April 21 (AP)—Bar gold, unfixed, 34 penny to 34 5/8d. (Sterling price equivalent to 534.78.)

Wall Street Hears

New York, April 21 (INS)—That Commercial Solvents (CYC) earned around 25 cents a share in the first quarter against 21 cents a year ago, that first half net of Cutler-Hammer (CEH) will be well above the 87 cents reported for the like 1935 period.

That continuance of regular dividends and occasional extras by Universal Leaf Tobacco (UVV) is indicated.

That Guantanamo Sugar (GS) will show a small deficit in the year ending Sept. 30.

HEARST Attacks New TAX

WHOLE IDEA SOCIALISTIC

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service.

New York, April 21—Taxation is being employed increasingly as an instrument for social and economic planning.

For example, the President's current proposal for a punitive tax on undivided corporate profits would tend to lessen the power of business executives.

Corporate savings—the ploughing back into company treasuries of a sizable share of the profits—have given the directing officers of corporations, who handle the company purse-strings, an immense authority.

One of the administration advisers, in advocating forcing out all current profits in the form of dividends, argued that as a result executives would no longer be able to plan major moves of expansion without submitting such proposals to stockholders, who would have to subscribe additional capital.

Dealing with the motives behind the President's tax proposals, W. R. Hearst, in a challenging letter to this writer on the subject, points out:

"It seems obvious to me that Mr. Roosevelt's whole scheme of wanton waste and destructive taxation is a systematic plan not for economic purposes, not merely for political purposes, but for social purposes, as well.

"He believes in the socialization of business and industry.

"The power to tax is the power to destroy. Taxation was used to drive State banks out of existence and concentrate the issue of currency in the Federal government. Mr. Roosevelt is using taxation deliberately in the same manner.

"He is proceeding to tax industry out of private hands and into the hands of the government.

"That is the plan.

"But what does placing industry in the hands of government mean?

"It means placing it in the hands of POLITICIANS.

"Only very ordinary persons with very rudimentary intelligence or very visionary viewpoints could imagine that politicians would or could conduct the business and industries of the country as well as experienced and able business men can conduct them.

"American politicians, however, are, in the main, parasites on the body politic. They are men who as a rule have made failures of their own business and have gone into politics in order to be supported at the public expense. They are thus created, constituted and educated because of their experience in failure and because of their proven lack of practical ability are destined to make certain failures of the public businesses.

"And when these politicians make failures of the businesses of the nation, when they wreck the industries of the nation, they will wreck the institutions which provide the EMPLOYMENT of the nation.

"In fact they will wreck the nation.

"Intelligent citizens should give most careful consideration to the question of whether they believe the average grade of intelligence possessed by politicians can run great business practically and successfully.

"If the politicians fail to succeed in the conduct of the nation's businesses what will happen to the nation's trade?

"What will happen to the nation's wealth? What will happen to the nation's governmental income? What will happen to the nation's employment? What will happen to the nation's personal prosperity? What will happen to everyone's individual welfare and existence?

"Does any thoughtful person believe for instance that the politicians can handle the other great complex businesses of the nation any better than they handled the air transportation when they took it over and failed miserably with it?

"When these politicians fail miserably with all the nation's businesses, what is to become of us?

"What is to become of our depositors, what is to become of our employment?

What is to become of our living?

"Are they not worth a few minutes of careful thought NOW?"

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

"Bob" Shea, Brighton, New England's champion scale model builder, expects to take his model of the Sikorsky S-39 amphibian to New York when the national contest for the 17 Junior Birdmen wing winners is held soon.

"Bob's" model won first prize of $50 in the recent Boston American wing elimination of the national scale model competition and thus will compete against 16 other wing winners for national prizes of $1000, $500 and $250.

David Meuse

Rather than trust his delicate handcraft to mail or express service, he plans to carry the model by bus or train to national headquarters.

The eight judges who spent three hours examining the four entries in the contest, as well as spectators, believe his decision is wise. The Brighton youth's model showed exceptional skill, detail, ingenuity and painstaking effort.

It won a rating of 92 against 72 scored by his nearest competitor, the model built by David Meuse, of Wakefield, who won second prize of $25. Gerald Leger, of Waltham, won third prize with a rating of 60.

Gerald Leger

made the champion's model outstanding were these:

A small battery in the hatch that enables wing lights, tail lights landing lights and instrument panel to light up; a complete cockpit with upholstered seats and safety straps with tiny buckles; shock absorber on tail wheel, woven wire from a jewelry store used for spark plug connections and retractable landing gear.

A little roughness in the paint on the upper airfoil and controls that did not operate quite as smoothly as they should due to running paint kept the model from getting a perfect score.

According to the judges the only detail that kept the model from being an exact reproduction of the Sikorsky S-39, probably the most difficult and intricate of all planes to copy, was a brake cable.

SAVINGS

N. E. Leads

ALL OTHER

Sections

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

New England banks lead the country in per capita savings. In fact no other section even closely approximates the record of institutions in this section.

With per capita savings of $517 New England has a safe lead over the next highest section, the Middle Atlantic States, with per capita savings of $386.

And those who have been prone to consider the progress of this section halted might well wonder if New Englanders do not have more money to handle. Especially when the $179 per capita savings for the country as a whole are considered. And the regular creation of more money in banks seems ideal evidence that industrial and business conditions here are in a healthy state.

The vigor with which traders sold the eastern rails yesterday following the ICC decision putting the 2-cent-a-mile rate into effect June 2 was somewhat surprising. Apparently they reasoned that there would be a certain set loss in revenues and arrived at definite figures by estimating the effect if applied to the latest available passenger revenue totals. This, of course, does not allow for increased riding and consequent recovery of revenue; their method of figuring sets down as lost forever.

* * *

Notebook: We may be unduly optimistic, but it does seem to us the Eastern rails are going to have a lot of new riders after June . . . And of all the rails affected, the bankrupt New Haven will be hardest hit . . . U. S. Steel after rolling over above 50 is now in an area favorable to a technical rebound . . . It is 66-67% . . . Chrysler has had its troubles since 1053 . . . However, 95-98 should be given its chance to prove a support level capable of starting a new upturn . . .

* * *

The last hour selling wave on Monday shattered long-term resistance on the industrial average without very much delay. Rails held a bit better and may save the day from immediate collapse. Industrials, however, are probably our best current guide to probable trend action. Indicated support is at 149-151 on the Dow-Jones index and should facilitate a temporary turn. The character of this rise will determine whether or not an intermediate one has been seen.

* * *

Questions and Answers: From the character of our market I judge that near readers did not trim down accounts as suggested . . . When we suggested restriction of accounts we set down a formula for selling . . . With stress laid on selling out commitments that had been somely inactive . . . This in particular was disregarded . . . With the emphasis on stocks noted here . . . In the case of low priced stocks such as Minneapolis Moline, U. S. Realty and Thompson Starrett, still suitable for long term holding, averaging to reduce costs is advisable during weak spells . . . Either that or sales on the first good rally.

Out of current stock market weakness there are likely to come many excellent buying opportunities. And in issues that have more than fair share of grief during the good market times of the last year. American Sugar seems such a stock. Here is a personal income that seems thus usually reliable sources the writer has received advice to suggest its purchase. Inventory position is said to be much improved and full year earnings are spoken of in glowing terms. Working capital position is strong and the company has a fine investment in three important sugar companies.

HOLC EMPLOYES Subject to Tax

Albany, April 21 (INS)—Compensation received by officers and employes of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation is subject to the New York state personal income tax, according to a ruling today by the state tax commission.

The commission stated that the HOLC is a separate corporation and that its employees are not officials or employes of the U. S. Government.

STOCKS Turn MIXED

FEEBLE RALLIES APPEAR

New York, April 21—Feeble rallies appeared on the stock market trail today, but many issues were unable to find the upward grade.

Shares gave their best performance following the opening. Then the list exhibited highly irregular tendencies. At the same time the trading pace was relatively slow.

Among gainers of fractions to a point or so near the start of the list were American Can, Consolidated Oil, Douglas Aircraft, Johns-Manville, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Chrysler, American Telephone, Public Service, American Smelting, Dome, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

Checks were dropped about 11 points despite a favorable earnings report. The newly-split stock of Air Reduction was off 1. Chemical and American Locomotive yielded 1 to 3, while U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Santa Fe, Lackawanna, Pittsburgh, General Motors, Western Union, Anaconda and Kennecott were fractionally lower.

Bonds were a bit steadier. Commodities were mixed. The dollar improved in terms of leading foreign currencies.

After its boost of yesterday, imported bar silver at New York was reduced ¼ of a cent an ounce to 45½ cents as Secretary Morgenthau stated the treasury's buying rate was unchanged at 45 cents.

Although financial quarters here were not enthused over Europe's problems, the markets of London and Paris did not reflect expectation of untoward events.

Overnight domestic news was viewed as rather negative, but the continuance of satisfactory trade reports was regarded by some analysts as an influence which, soon or late, would effect stocks.

Timely Topics

A recovery barometer was seen in a substantial upturn in cigarette production last month. The Tobacco Institute of America reported that March output of the "short smoke" was up 3.96 per cent over that in February and up 9.7 per cent ahead of the 1935 month.

Estimates of recent merchandising activity indicate department and other retail stores were enjoying an increase of profit margins over a year ago.

Sales were said to have shown consistent gains each month this year over 1936 and business reduces have been unnecessary, in most instances, to attract customers.

Early freight car loadings figures for last week, likely to be made officially announced Friday, would be somewhat above those of the previous week and well over the aggregate for the corresponding 1935 period.

At the start of foreign currency dealings sterling and French francs were unchanged at $4.94¾ and 6.59½ cents, respectively.

Comments of Brokers

Those who failed to reduce their commitments should simply stand aside and be prepared to do so on the next rally.—J. E. Malloy—Hornblower & Weeks.

The market's action Monday in the heavy trading provided some encouragement. There appeared to be a scarcity of offerings. Prices were fairly heavy.—J. S. Wilson—Josephthal & Co.

Forced selling may become potent as a depressing influence, and if it materialized would accelerate the decline out of line with technical proportions.—R. S. Feigus—Prentice, Blauner & Brady.

The recent heaviness in stocks has not been reflected to any great extent in bonds, the demand for fixed income investments being none so strong that little notice is taken of the more or less technical selling in common stocks.—F. H. Richardson—Southgate & Co.

A more cautious policy remains necessary, temporarily, but the promising business picture still warrants holding bullish policy for the pull—J. F. Mahe—Shields & Co.

A technical rebound seems an early possibility so that a scant demand for deserving equities would appear likely on the part of traders.—J. S. Bache & Co.

Curb Short Interest

New York Curb Exchange announced short position in all securities as of March 31 totaled 88,000 shares, against 89,260 on February 28.

Money to Loan

New Type of Personal Loan Service

BORROW
the cash you need
WITHOUT COLLATERAL OR ENDORSERS

You don't have to ask your friends to sign anything. You do not have to put up stocks or bonds or life insurance or furniture or your bank book as collateral. We will make you a loan up to $5,000 on no other security than your good name and earning power.

Just decide on the amount you need. Come into our offices and fill out your application—that's all there is to it. You repay us in convenient monthly amounts. The payments take care of both principal and interest—and costs are the lowest available for this type of loan. Further, by special arrangement, a loan made under this plan carries with it an attractive insurance feature.

If, by any chance, this particular plan will not fit your individual needs or circumstances, we feel certain that we can arrange one that does. Come in and see us.

TERRORISM—In the Manner of George III and His Hessians

NOTHING irritates a New Dealer so much as to show him up for the reactionary which he IS—a flagrant, unqualified and extreme reactionary, and NOT a liberal in any sense of the word.

There is no reaction so utter and violent as the reaction from liberty to tyranny—no reaction so extreme as that which carries us BACKWARD FOR CENTURIES, to conditions which even our forefathers thought outgrown forever.

The President, strange to say, seems oblivious of this. His mind apparently lacks the depth or training to supply him with any perception of it.

Take the "Black-Guard Committee," for instance.

The President cannot escape responsibility for its outrageous activities.

The country knows its infamies were not embarked upon without at least the tacit approval of the President, nor could they survive a moment the slightest indication of his disapproval.

The Committee's blanket subpoena of personal telegrams and its requisition of private papers, without regard to their relevance to any legitimate subject of inquiry, ARE NOTHING MORE NOR LESS THAN A REVIVAL OF THE HATED WRITS OF ASSISTANCE ISSUED BY THE BRITISH CROWN, WHICH DROVE THE AMERICAN COLONISTS TO OPEN REVOLT.

"I will to my dying day," said he, "oppose, with all the powers and faculties God has given me, all such instruments, as slavery on the one hand, and villainy on the other."

* * *

HE pronounced these blanket subpoenas "the worst instruments of arbitrary power, the most destructive of liberty and fundamental principles, known to the law, since they placed the liberty of every man IN THE HANDS OF EVERY PETTY OFFICER."

The Supreme Court of the United States, in a famous decision, referred to this stirring episode in our history, describing it as "PERHAPS THE MOST PROMINENT EVENT WHICH INAUGURATED THE RESISTANCE OF THE COLONIES TO THE OPPRESSIONS OF THE MOTHER COUNTRY."

And John Adams, then a young lawyer, who was present when Otis delivered his speech of protest, remarks in his notes of the scene:

"THEN AND THERE WAS THE FIRST ACT OF OPPOSITION TO THE ARBITRARY CLAIMS OF GREAT BRITAIN. THEN AND THERE THE CHILD, INDEPENDENCE, WAS BORN."

The principle involved was carried into our Constitution by the Fourth Amendment, safeguarding the citizen in the possession of his papers and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures—a provision which every authority on our Constitution regards as indispensable to the full enjoyment of the rights of personal security, personal liberty and private property.

THIS AMENDMENT AFFECTS THE VERY ESSENCE OF CONSTITUTIONAL LIBERTY AND SECURITY.

"Its principles reach farther," said the Supreme Court, "than the concrete form of any case before the Court. They apply to ALL invasions on the part of the Government and its employes of the sanctity of a man's home and the privacies of life."

* * *

BREAKING into a house and opening boxes and drawers are circumstances of mere aggravation.

"It is not the breaking of doors and the rummaging of drawers that constitute the essence of the offense," according to the Supreme Court, "but it is the invasion of the citizen's right of personal security, personal liberty and private property."

Today the emblem of this hated force, this bayonet thrust against an American home and the invasion of his sacred right of privacy, is not the Red-Guardsman of the British Army, but—as depicted in the cartoon—the BLACK-GUARDSMAN of the "Black-Guard Committee" of the Raw Deal.

IF this is not tyranny, fellow Americans—WHAT IS TYRANNY?

And what is YOUR reaction to this spirit of REACTION which has gripped your Government, and led it to the abandonment of Freedom for LAWLESS FORCE and RUTHLESS OPPRESSION?

"Dear Govt."

U. S. GOVT.

Dear Govt:

My brother-in-law Jake come home from Jail today, he does a lot of his heavy thinking in jail. "I just figgered out who is Mr. Roosevelt's best friend," he says to me.

"Well, I says, "who is it?"

"The Supreme Court," says Jake, "because if it wasn't for them 9 old men, the President wouldn't have nobody to pin his Alibis on."

I figgered Jake was fooling, but then I remembered how Mr. Roosevelt was talking lately, he says the Supreme Court is the reason why he hasen't carried out no Promises, such as putting folks to work or balansing the U. S. Budjit.

"By golly, Jake," I says, "you are right. I hope the Pres. will go on useing the Supreme Court for a friend, and blame them for anything he didn't get done."

But Jake says Mr. Roosevelt hadn't ought to do the blameing himself, he better leave it for other Democrats to do. "Politics is like a Baseball Game," says Jake, "and if the Pres. don't let somebody else crab at the Umpire he might lose his job like our 1st Baseman done."

The 1st Baseman that Jake meant was the one on our Home Team. He could not hit the side of his hat, but every time he missed the ball he would turn around & crab at the Umpire.

Well, he fanned out 4 times in 7 innings, and was still crabbing at the Umpire So then the crowd begun to yell, they heaved Pop Bottles & says, "Take him out & send him to the Showers, he is a bum sport & he don't know baseball from beans!"

That was the end of our 1st Baseman, because the American people is funny that way, they like to crab at the Umpire from the bleechers, but they get tired of a batter which does the crabbing for them.

Well, our Supreme Court is sort of a U. S. Umpire, so I hope Mr. Roosevelt will take a tip from Jake. I hope he will just swing on the ball like a good sport, and the fans won't mind if he misses a few now & then.

But if Mr. Roosevelt done too much crabbing at the Umpire, folks might begin to think he hadn't never learned to play ball fair, they might get tired of it and send him back to the Rush Leagus where he come from.

Yours truly,
W. NORMAN.
